Nearly 8000 Miners Vote To Call Off Strike Today

Production Hard Hit, WPB Warns
As Great Majority Remain Away

Allies Face Pinch

that Allies can barely squeeze through winter on present coal

and Los Angeles Motor Coach workers. Page 9.

Frankly Worried

While the War Production Board was warning yesterday that the coal strike in Alabama and Indiana "is hitting hard at war production," several thousand miners in those States and in Ohio decided to return to work today, though the great majority of the estimated 30,000 to 35,000 idle men apparently intended to remain out.

The War Labor Board, in a special Sunday session devoted to efforts to settle the mine contract dispute, devoted much of the session to consideration of a proposal to trim by 37½ cents the $1.75 additional pay that would be granted miners under the Illinois coal contract now before the board for approval. No decisions were reached by the board.

The WPB statement on the coal stoppage came from Acting Chairman Charles E. Wilson, who declared that "already shipyards, not only on the Gulf Coast, which has been hit hardest, but on the West Coast and in New England States, are beginning to feel the pinch.
This is because the biggest single item in production in the Birmingham area is steel for ships, both plates and structural steel."

Other War Industries Hit Too
He pointed out, however, that a "good bit" of the production goes into other direct war uses such as ammunition—both small arms and artillery—shipping drums and barrels, construction machinery and parts for maintenance and repair.

The strike came, Wilson declared, "at a time when every ounce of effort and every pound of steel is needed to keep pace with urgent military demand." It hit, he said, "at a time when the Nation's steel mills had only a two weeks' supply of coal."

Although the drop in coal production is not as large as the loss last spring from the widespread strike in the Pennsylvania and Virginia regions, the WPB official said, "this strike is even more dangerous because of the National shortage of reserve supply and the approach of winter with its additional demands for home heating."

1000 in Alabama Vote Return
Meanwhile, from Alabama, where 20,000 miners have been idle in protest against continued delay in obtaining Government approval for a working contract, the Associated Press reported that the United Mine Workers local at the two Say-reton mines of Republic Steel Corporation employing about 1000 men had voted to return to work today. The action was taken in response to a second appeal from John L. Lewis, UMW president, that the stoppage be ended.

Another UMW international representative, John J. Hanratty, the AP said, reported the local at the Parrish mine of the Railway Fuel Co., voted "almost unanimously" to reenter the pits today. The mine employs 500 men.

Other UMW locals meeting in Alabama to consider the renewed back-to-work appeal, had not been heard from.

miners had been idle, Tom Rancey,

Shooting of Woman Laid to Family Row; Husband Is Held

A series of family quarrels last night resulted in a woman being taken to Casualty Hospital suffering with three bullet wounds and her husband being held for investigation, police said.

Virginia Payne, 30, of 61 S. W., at the hospital, told police, they said, that her husband, John, 37, came home shortly after 6 p. m. and after an exchange of words, pulled a gun and began shooting at her.
One bullet hit her in the chest, police said. The woman told investigators that she grappled with her husband for the gun and that two more shots found their mark, one below a knee and the other in a hip.

Finally getting the gun, she told police, the woman tossed it into the hall. The neighbors, hearing the commotion, rushed to her aid and others called police.

Sgt. Abel Mann, District police, took Payne into custody for investigation shortly after the shooting.

Dogs Bite Eight More In D. C. and Vicinity

By Jean Reiff
Post Staff Writer

Six persons in Washington and two in nearby counties were bitten by dogs yesterday, and a black-and-white pointer was shot by the police here as the District Commissioners' order to muzzle all dogs running loose became effective.

District victims yesterday were Betty Jane Kocher, 12, of 2507 32d
st. se.; Gwendolyn Cavanaugh, 14, of 217 34th st. ne.; Lewis Ens-minger, 13, of 833 Florida ave. ne.; Donald Hurwitz, 3, of 120 Ingraham st. nw.; Bernice Cash, Negro, 15, of 1520 8th st. nw.; and John Spriggs, Negro, 31, of 3808 N. st. nw.
In nearby Maryland, two girls were reported bitten by a dog while playing in front of their homes.

Prince Georges County police at Hyattsville gave the names of the victims as Alice McGalliaris, 8, and Helen McGalliaris, 10, both of 1312 70th ave., Huntville, Md.

Only one of the dogs that bit the eight persons was picked up and determined whether any of the animals were rabid.

Meanwhile, Dr. James Cumming, chief of the Bureau of Communicable Diseases, announced that 74 of the 200 rabid dogs found in the Washington area since the epidemic started in April were in the District. Dr. Cumming estimated that approximately 100 Washingtonians had been treated for rabies, 65 of them receiving the Pasteur treatment at Gallinger Hospital and the others by private physicians.

The one dog shot yesterday was killed after Pts. C. B. Roper and R. V. Gary of the Eighth Precinct, received a complaint that a stray dog was wandering around Broad Branch rd. nw. They tracked down the pointer and destroyed him in the 3200 block of Broad Branch
rd. nw. The dog's body was turned over to the Health Department for examination.

Police were active throughout the day enforcing the Commissioners' order, which followed a demand, by health authorities that a dog quarantine be imposed as the result of an epidemic of rabies.

Frank Marks, poundmaster, spent most of yesterday in the field.
His assistant said it had been a very busy day out was unable to give the number of dogs picked up. Ordinarily the pound wagon is sent out only on emergency calls.

Fund Short By $2,300,000; 5 Days to Go

Drive Is to Close Friday if Failure
Doesn't Prolong It

With only five days left to raise at least $2,300,000 and send the Community War Fund drive over the top, campaign leaders will meet today for their second combined report of progress toward Washington's $4,800,000 goal.

Over the weekend the drive for funds for 145 agencies on three fronts stood 85 per cent subscribed. Additional pledges will be reported today by the Advance Gifts, Business and Finance, Government and Metropolitan Divisions and nearby counties, after a box luncheon at 12:30 p. m. in the "Hall of Flags," U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Failure Means Extension
As the "brotherhood" campaign drives to its official climax here on Friday, similar joint report meetings were scheduled for Wednesday and Friday nights at the "Hall of Flags," where a room-length chart records Washington's share of the Nation-wide drive.

The drive will close this week
unless Washingtonians fail to meet the plea for dollars for needy on the home front, the service front and the United Nations front. Herbert L. Willett, Jr., has asserted that, while the "staggered" collection system instituted this year may necessitate a longer campaign than scheduled, there will be no resolution. Only nonvoters are to be solicited if the $4,800,000 mark is not reached by Friday.

But fund officials were confident that District area residents would this week give generously from their pockets—in answer to the theme of the 1944 campaign, "crown thy good with brotherhood."

Party Resurgent'

Spangler Foresees '44 Victory; Cites GOP Trend in 38 States

Harrison E. Spangler assured Republican Party workers and voters yesterday that they can count on a 1944 election victory because, he said, the GOP now "is a unified party looking to the future, as contrasted with the clashing, squabbling, disunited New Deal Democratic Party."

"The Republican Party today is the resurgent, dominant, victorious party of the United States," said the Republican national chairman in attacking what he reported as "feverish propaganda" by the New Deal that the Republicans have no hope of defeating President Roosevelt next year if the war is still on.
Spangler expressed his views on the presidential and congressional elections next year in a memorandum to party supporters to which he attached graphs and maps show-

Two Perish As Gas Blast Rocks Easton

Great Explosion
At Plant Wrecks
Homes and Buildings

Easton, Pa., Oct. 24.—A terrific explosion followed by a six-hour fire destroyed a large portion of the Easton Gas Works today, killing at least two persons, injuring more than 35 and cutting off gas service to the Easton-Phillipsburg, N. J., war industry area.

The blast also damaged homes and business structures within a wide radius. Most of the injured, including several elderly persons and small children, were in their homes when the earth-shaking explosion occurred.

The dead were John Kepic of Dunmore, Pa., who was delivering gasoline to the plant, and Henry Jordan, a gas works employee.

Gas Back in Three Days Company officials, who reported gas manufacturing equipment escaped serious damage, said service could be restored to war plants and other essential institutions within three days, but that more than 75,000 residents of the area probably would be without service longer.

The Philadelphia office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, began an investigation.

Plant executives said the explosion occurred in an auxiliary gas tank and that a six-story storage tank was saved, preventing a much worse disaster. They declined to estimate damage but firemen said it would run into "several hundred thousand dollars."

Thousand Evacuated
A thousand residents of a three-block area, were evacuated for fear the larger tank would explode.

When they returned to their littered homes, they found furniture tossed about and windows shattered.

Display windows of 40 stores along Northampton st., the city's main thoroughfare, about three blocks from the explosion, were shattered.

Most residents of the city went without their Sunday breakfasts, with the supply of gas to homes and restaurants shut off. Phillipsburg, N. J., across the Delaware River, also was without gas.

Red cross disaster forces set up shelters and feeding stations.

Use League Machinery, Taft Urges

Would Simplify Cooperation After War, He Says on Eve
Of Senate Debate

By Jack Bell
Associated Press Staff Writer

Use of the League of Nations as the framework for international cooperation to enforce future peace was suggested yesterday by Senator Taft (Republican) of Ohio on the eve of Senate debate on a proposal to pledge American participation in a world authority with power to prevent aggression.

Taft, a supporter of the Connally peace preservation resolution, told this reporter he would propose in debate that the existing machinery of the League and of the World Court be utilized to simplify the task of organizing the nations for collaboration after the war.

"While I realize that the Connally resolution does nothing more than endorse the general principles of foreign policy, I think it might be well to discuss now the machinery by which cooperation could be carried out," the Ohio Senator said.

Road Open, Connally Says
I think we have got to go to the point eventually of saying that we are willing to abide by the decision of an international tribunal—on which we cannot have a majority vote—in designating 'X' as an aggressor and joining in stripping him of his tools of aggression," he added.

While he did not commit himself on Taft's suggestions, Chairman Connally (Democrat) of Texas
of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee said his resolution would leave the road open to use of the league machinery if the nations decide later such a course would be practical.

The Connally resolution proposes that the United States, "acting through its constitutional processes, join with free and sovereign nations in the establishment and maintenance of international authority with power to prevent aggression and to preserve the peace of the world."

Way Open to Use World Court
"That certainly leaves the way open to use any existing agency for the preservation of peace, including the World Court, The Hague convention and the League of Nations," Connally said. He added that the language would not preclude formation of an entirely new organization, if that should be thought wise.

A group headed by Senators Ball (Republican) of Minnesota, Burton (Republican) of Ohio, Hill (Democrat) of Alabama, and Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico has proposed in an amendment that the United Nations be made the organizing agency, being joined by "such free and sovereign nations as may be duly admitted." Their amendment, to be offered tomorrow by Senator Pepper (Democrat) of Florida, would provide also that the international organization thus formed be clothed with power, including military force, "to suppress aggression."

Ball told this reporter that as far as he was concerned he would welcome a move to vitalize the League of Nations as the operating agency.
He pointed out that under the proposed amendment the United Nations could take the initiative in such action, with others joining as they became eligible.

All Roads Lead to Rome, But— They're Mined, General Says

Nazi Prisoners Tell
Of Heavy Casualties,
Short Supplies in Italy

By the Associated Press
On the Volturno River Front,
Oct. 16 (Delayed).—German prisoners captured in the Volturno offensive confirm that Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring's army is suffering heavy casualties.

Some say their units are so short of supplies they are eating only one meal daily.

Others said some regiments were so depleted that they consisted of two battalions instead of the usual three. A serious shortage of artillery and transport was reported.

I saw one German swallow a can of American "C" rations, composed of meat and vegetable stew. He told an officer he had been limited to one meal daily.

Our intelligence section discounts this type of statement. An officer said there might be individual units temporarily short of food, but there were no indications the enemy forces as a whole were not eating well.

The state of enemy morale varies widely. Some prisoners come in badly shaken from Allied barrages, openly glad to get out of the war, and say the Army as a whole believes Germany has lost.

5-to-6-Mile Gain

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Algiers,
Oct. 24.—The British Eighth Army, launching a drive against the Trigno River line on the anniversary of El Alamein, spearheaded ahead 5 to 6 miles yesterday and crossed the river, it was announced today.

Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's veterans of the march from Egypt to Italy seized three towns.
To the west, the Fifth Army rammed fresh holes into the enemy's mountain defenses along the upper Volturno River capturing Baia-E-Latina, 4 miles northwest of Dra-goni, in a rush up the valley toward Venafro, the anchor of the new German line blocking the way to Rome.

The Trigno, roughly paralleling the Biferno River, empties into the Adriatic 12 miles above Termoli and 7 miles below Vasto. This plunge posed a threat to the strategical lateral road from Vasto to Isernia.

Enemy Fights Stubbornly

The Trigno offensive was sprung under the personal command of General Montgomery. His troops also captured Lucito, 11 miles north of Campobasso and only 6 miles short of the Trigno; Montenero, 5 miles northwest of Montecellone, and Campochiaro, in the center.

The British and Canadians battered a path uphill to take Campochiaro, 5 miles southwest of Vin-chiostro, and the nearby town commanding the only road leading north and west into the heart of the Nazi mountain positions.

The continuing American advance along both banks of the upper Volturno toward Venafro and seizure of Baia-E-Latina coincided with a visit by Gen. Dwight
D. Eisenhower yesterday to the Fifth Army front.

The Germans still are fighting stubbornly, making particularly effective use of artillery and mortar positions and machine-gun nests on the heights.

Way Opened for Bridgehead

On the Fifth Army's coastal flank between the Volturno's mouth and lofty Maseio ridge, the "situation is fairly static," an Allied officer said.

The Canadians and British in the center, where the Fifth and Eighth Army fronts link up, were reported encountering heavy Nazi artillery fire as well as extremely difficult terrain.

Montgomery's assault on the Trigno line went off to a flying start. Its momentum rolled the enemy back and the breaching of the strong river positions at one point opened the way for establishment of a bridgehead.

The Germans, who previously had been reported moving fresh

Moscow Conferees Begin Task Of Drafting Agreements

Moscow, Oct. 24.—The Foreign Ministers' conference moved today into the vital phase of drafting in specific terms the agreements to come out of the fateful three-power meeting.

The nature of these documents was not disclosed, but the veil of secrecy over the conference lifted enough to give a glimpse of the way the work is proceeding.

In the first week, it was learned,
U. S. Secretary of State Cordell
Hull, British Foreign Secretary
Anthony Eden, and Foreign Com-missar Vyacheslav Molotov settled on the agenda and passed to discussions of points in principle.

Their experts, who held their first separate meeting last night, took over the task of putting these points on paper while the ministers continued their own deliberations.

Most members of the American and British delegations took time off tonight to see a special performance of the ballet, Swan Lake, at the Bolshoi Theater. Eden took in the show but Hull spent the evening resting.

The American and British delegates were given an ovation at the theater. The packed house stood and cheered as they entered the former imperial box, which was decorated with American, British and Soviet flags. Eden led the British group. The American party was headed by the new United States Ambassador, W.
Averell Harriman, and his daughter, Kathleen.

Hull had a private talk at noon today at the British Embassy.

Definite word came from the British delegation that Eden's separate talks with Premier Stalin and Molotov "related to purely Anglo-Russian affairs."

Meanwhile, the plain-spoken publication, War and the Working Class, citing lend-lease aid, the unconditional surrender of Italy and other events, said Allied collaboration already had produced

Bombers Blast At Heart of Nazi Europe

Long-Range U. S.
Fighter Planes Make Debut as Escorts

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 24.—Allied bombers, striking from north and south, bombed France, Austria and Hungary in the heart of Germany's fortress today as the Americans readied new forces for long-range penetrations, perhaps to Berlin and beyond.

Twin-tailed American Lightning fighters, returning to Britain from North Africa for the first time in many months, made their debut as long-range escorts, and American Thunderbolts also flew cover for medium Marauders attacking France.

Nazi fighter bases at Beauvais-Nivillers and St. Andre de l'Eure and the bomber base at Montdidier were attacked without Allied loss, and Thunderbolts, Spitfires and Typhoons carried out supporting sweeps with the loss of one Spitfire. Ten enemy planes were brought down.

A force of planes swept into Cherbourg harbor at wavetop height through a heavy hail of anti-aircraft fire that hit every plane. They fired a medium-sized merchant ship.

The Germans early tonight dropped high explosives and fire bombs in East Anglia. The Paris radio hinted recent attacks on Britain were a "prelude to something sinister and hitherto unknown. The mathematical regularity of the raids which, at the present stage, are purely experimental, hints that the beginning of the reprisals (for the bombing of Germany) are not far off."

'Major Damage' Admitted

Berlin and Luxembourg radios went off the air tonight, indicating another Allied raid might be under way against Germany.

Meanwhile, up from the Mediterranean came four-engine bombers to sweep the Vienna area and Styria district of Austria, the German

2000 Germans, 2 Strongholds Taken by Yugoslav Guerillas

By the Associated Press

London, Oct. 24.—Gen. Josip (Tito) Broz' guerrilla armies, battling German forces along almost the entire length of Yugoslavia, have stormed two strongly defended towns and captured 2000 Nazi officers and men in Western Bosnia, the free Yugoslav radio announced today.

Tito's communique lashed out at the Chetnik forces of Gen. Draza Mihailovic, King Peter's war minister, accusing some of them of joining with the Germans in an attack on Tito's partisans along the Albanian border.

"German troops and Mihailovic Chetniks are attacking without success at Mateosov, near Kolasin," the communique said. "So far they have lost 300 killed."

Russian Drive
In Dnieper Bend
Within 6 Miles Of Krivoi Rog

By the Associated Press

London (Monday), Oct. 25.—The Red army rolled to within 6 miles of imperiled Krivoi Rog in the center of the Dnieper River loop yesterday and sped 6 miles past conquered Melitopol in an accelerated drive which killed 2000 Germans and wrecked scores of enemy tanks, guns and planes on the road to the Crimea, Moscow announced early today.

Paced by a Soviet air force pounding at escape channels out of the Dnieper bend area, the Russians shattered every desperate German effort to stem the twin offensives fast rolling up the enemy's defenses in southern Russia.

Vast Booty Seized

A midnight communique listed tremendous booty, including more than 71 tanks, 52 guns, 243 machine guns, ammunition dumps and other equipment, and said more than 6500 Germans had been killed or routed between the Sea of Azov and Gomel. Most of the enemy's casualties were suffered inside the Dnieper bend and in the Melitopol sector.

A German-controlled Paris broadcast said Soviet units already were fighting inside the iron and rail center of Krivoi Rog in their push southward to link up with the other army, which toppled Melitopol.

Moscow announced the capture of 50 villages, including Losovskis, only 6 miles north of Krivoi Rog, and a German broadcast described the Soviet river-loop army as a "steamroller."

Axis Troops Imperiled

Panning out from Melitopol the Russians said their southern army smashed three German strong-points, and also took the railway station of Tashchenak, 6 miles southwest of Melitopol on the railway to the Crimea, as the Germans vainly tried to stem a twin onrush

Allied Headquarters in the Southwest Pacific (Monday), Oct.
25.—Allied warplanes have destroyed 23 Japanese planes, a number of barges and two ships at Wewak, New Guinea, and scored direct hits on a large ship resembling an aircraft carrier near Buka in the Solomons.

A communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur today said 20 planes caught on the ground at the enemy stronghold of Wewak were destroyed by medium bombers.
Twenty-eight enemy craft rose to intercept. Three were shot down and three others listed as prob-ables.

Four Allied fighters failed to return. Two cargo ships, each estimated at 1000 tons, were sunk in the harbor off Wewak. Another was damaged and 16 barges were sunk or damaged.

Fighters destroyed a 200-ton
cargo ship southwest of Rabaul,
New Britain, while bombers hit the supply dump areas at Gasmeta and Cape Hoskins.

War Sidelights

Japs Free Filipino Prisoners

Sixty-five Filipino and 14 Chinese prisoners were released at a ceremony at a prison camp outside Manila, the Japanese news agency Domei said yesterday.

The action was in accordance with a proclamation of "general amnesty for political prisoners" by the newly inaugurated Philippine puppet President, Jose P. Laurel.

An earlier broadcast said "Filipino prisoners of war" had been released.

Venice Fascist Seat

London, Oct. 24 (P).—Benito Mussolini has made Venice the residence of foreign diplomatic missions to his Republican Fascist government, the German radio said today, and Bulgarian, Hungarian, Rumanian and Japanese representatives already have moved there from Rome.

Japs Won't Celebrate

New York, Oct. 24 (P).—The Japanese, who devoted a full week last December to celebrating the first anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, will refrain from observing the anniversary this year "in view of the importance of the war situation," the Tokyo radio said today.

Low Air Traffic Loss

London, Oct. 24 (P).—The percentage of losses of aircraft making the North Atlantic crossing was less than one-half of 1 per cent for the year ended September 30, the British Air Ministry announced tonight.

The figures include crossings by military planes of both the United States and Britain and crossings by the British Overseas Airways Corporation with civilian traffic.

Chinese Pursue Retreating Foe At Hsiaofeng

Chungking, Oct. 24 (P).—The Chinese command today reported fierce fighting along the western bank of the Salween River opposite the Chinese stronghold of Luku in Yunnan Province following a day-long artillery duel Tuesday.

Chinese batteries inflicted heavy damage, it said.

In western Chekiang Province, Chinese forces were said still to be pursuing the Japanese retreating in the southwest suburbs of Hsiaofeng.

A German broadcast said the Japanese thrust in the Burma-Yunnan border area already had achieved success and an "Allied attack against Burma has been shattered" by occupation of points that could serve as Chinese bases for a counter-invasion.

The Japanese now can concentrate upon warding off any attack from the India border, where "immense forces are said to have been concentrated by Lord Louis Mountbatten," said the broadcast.

Jap Positions Blasted

New Delhi, Oct. 24 (P).—The Royal Air Force ranged over Burma yesterday, blasting Japanese troop positions in widespread attacks, a communiqué said today.

Swooping down on a Japanese-occupied village in the Chin hills, the planes started a fire visible 30 miles away, and further south, fired army huts along the Taungup Pass road.

Students Unseat Argentine Police With Marbles

Montevideo, Uruguay, Oct. 24 (P).—Argentine University students at Cordoba, striking against Gen. Pedro Ramirez's government, are using marbles to break up mounted police forces, throwing them into the streets to make the horses skid and unseat their riders, it was reported here today.

Argentine's political parties are discussing their positions in view of the widespread opposition resulting when Ramirez ordered dismissal of all officials who signed a pro-democratic manifesto, and labor unions are preparing strikes, the travelers added.

Labor officials in Montevideo said many labor unions in Argentina planned strikes that might become general by next week.

Patriots Seized In Vichy Drive On Anti-Nazis

By International News Service
London (Monday), Oct. 25.—More than 1000 French patriots today were reported arrested in the last week for anti-Vichy activities in France.

The report came from the Nazi-controlled Paris radio, which referred to the patriots as "terrorists."

Earlier the Vichy radio said Pierre Laval's police, had arrested more than 400 on Sunday alone.

Some 200 of Sunday's prisoners were listed as "terrorists," 157 were described as "guilty of anti-national actions" and 50 were accused of "offenses against the common law."

It was obvious the Germans, alarmed by the growth of the underground movement, had ordered Laval to take immediate action. Reports were the Germans had given Laval to understand his regime would be superseded by an out-and-out Nazi administration if the Vichy police failed to curb the anti-Nazi movement.

The Vichy radio said the raids were staged all the way from Rennes in northern France to Montpellier in the south. Arrests were made in industrial cities including Limoges, Dijon, Poitiers, Lille, Bordeaux, Lyon, Toulouse and in the Haute-Savoie section.

Civilian Dead In War Placed At 22,000,000

By the Associated Press
This war has been designated as "the people's war" and "the war for survival."

There are millions of people—the old men, women and children who bore no arms—who already have failed to survive it.

Precisely how many is not known, but a tally of estimates for the world battle zones produces the shocking total of:

More than 22 million civilian dead.

Military men say the estimates are too high, but agree the civilian death toll is tremendous.

Polish sources estimate that 3,200,000 Poles and Polish Jews are dead. In Russia the figure most often mentioned is 15 million. The Chinese estimate that about three million civilians have died directly as a result of battle action or execution.

This does not include those who succumbed to starvation and disease because the enemy seized their food producing lands and turned an estimated 50 million from their homes.

The Dutch estimate the civilian toll as high as 50,000. French sources think it possible enemy action preceding the fall of France in 1940 resulted in a toll of 50,000. The toll has risen since because of executions and aerial bombardment.

Yugoslav diplomatic circles estimate the dead in their country at one million, the greater part of them Serbs. Greek officials believe more than half a million of their countrymen have died.

Of all belligerents, Great Britain is the only one in a position to offer an exact figure on its civilian dead—49,880—up to midsummer.

Now, war has come to the home of the German warmakers and the Reich is adding its toll to the non-combatant dead. The toll there grows by day and night, in Berlin, in Hamburg, in Bremen.

India's Freedom To Be Meeting Subject Tonight

"America's Stake in India's Freedom" will be the theme of a meeting at the National Press Club auditorium at 8 p. m. today.

Sponsored by the newly organized National Committee for India's Freedom, speakers will be Upton Close, author and radio commentator, Dr. Anup Singh, editor of India Today, and Dr. Young-Ching Wei, of United China Relief.

Dr. Syud Hossain, committee chairman, will preside.

Coincident with the famine now sweeping Bengal Province, the meeting is designed to "air the political and military danger of the present situation in India and will reveal Japan's feverish efforts to exploit this condition."

'Souvenir' From Germany

CLEW TO NAZI WEAPON—When a Flying Fortress piloted by Lieut. Elmer J. Nardi of Healdsburg, Calif., returned from a recent raid over Germany a spiral, ten-pound piece of metal, 4 inches thick and 14 inches long was found embedded in one of the wings. This flask-like chunk, which apparently failed to fragmentate when it struck the plane, is believed to be the first specimen to be procured of the Nazis' new rocket shell.

Deane Heads New Moscow Military Unit

By the Associated Press
Moscow, Oct. 24.—A new United States Military mission, headed by Maj. Gen. John R. Deane, was installed today, with the assignment of unifying and improving American cooperation with the Soviet armed forces.

The mission is designed to end a lack of cooperation between lend-lease and other American agencies in Moscow, about which Ambassador William H. Standley, former United States Ambassador to Russia, previously had complained.

Brig. Gen. Philip R. Faymonville, former head of the supply mission for lend-lease, left Moscow yesterday. Brig. Gen. Joseph A. Michela, former military attaché, already has returned to the United States. Rear Admiral Jack Duncan, naval attaché, has remained temporarily to complete the work.

The military mission arrived with Secretary Hull, but, serving with the delegation at the conference, it has not yet presented its credentials individually to the Soviet authorities.

Its constitution was disclosed by the announcement that Deane, as head of the military mission, accompanied the new Ambassador, W. Averell Harriman, to the Kremlin yesterday when the Ambassador presented his credentials to President Michael I. Kalinin.

Deane formerly was secretary of the combined chiefs of staff in Washington. Other members of the mission are Brig. Gen. Sidney T. Spaulding for lease-lend, Brig. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg for air, and Commodore Clarence E. Olsen for Navy.

The mission was assigned to work as a unit under Harriman, ending a situation whereby some officers in the embassy were not even on speaking terms with each other.

'Slips of Girls' Fight With Poles, Broadcast Says

New York, Oct. 24 (P).—The Soviet-sponsored Union of Polish Patriots said in a Moscow broadcast that the Polish Kosciuszko division had gone into action against the Germans on the Russian front October 12 and that "even slips of girls went into battle with hearts of heroes."

The broadcast quoted an order of the day issued by Gen. Zygmunt Berling, commander of the division, which said, "The time has come for bloody revenge—for the tears, for blackened ruins, cemeteries and torture chambers."

U. S. Officers' Barefaced Bluff Won French Airbase in Africa

By International News Service
Denison, Tex., Oct. 24.—Bluff of the good old American poker-playing variety enabled invasion forces to capture their first French airbase in North Africa, Col. Rosenham Beam, now commanding officer of Perrin Field near Denison, disclosed tonight.

American troops had fought their way ashore, but they needed their "air umbrella." The planes dared not leave their carriers until an airport had been taken. They could take off, but returning to the carriers was another matter.

Drive Up in Jeep

At the order of Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., commanding the assault forces, Col. Beam and another officer drove behind the French lines in a jeep to the Gazez airfield, where a dumbfounded French sentry permitted them to go on to the headquarters building.

The two strode, unannounced, into the office of the commandant, General Lahouille, an ace of First World War, and commanding officer of the French air forces in Morocco.

Beam boldly informed the startled commandant that he must "stop all action against us at once and the airport must surrender."

Lahouille replied that such action was impossible; he was honor bound to obey orders from higher authority. Beam retorted that he "regretted we will then have to destroy your air force and your air-drome."

The Bluff Works

The Americans walked to the door, wondering how much longer it would be before they were seized. Then Beam saw on a distant hill a General Sherman tank—how it got there he still doesn't know. He pointed to it and told the Frenchman:

"Your airfield is surrounded by hundreds of those tanks." He glanced at his watch. "They have orders to start firing on you in just a few minutes if you do not surrender. They will start firing whether I have returned or not."

Shrugging, Lahouille replied: "I can now surrender with honor."

Four hours later American planes, land-based at last, were flying into combat, and the tide turned.

Cholera Epidemic Takes Hundreds Of Lives in India

New Delhi, Oct. 24 (P).—Cholera, spreading rapidly through famine-ridden districts claimed 379 lives in September in the Jessore district alone northeast of Calcutta and has killed 456 others in the first 10 days of October, reports today disclosed.

Calcutta hospitals carried away 81 bodies of starvation victims Friday while admitting 188 new cases, and scores of other bodies were picked up in the streets.

H. N. Kunzru, nationalist council state member, said "there is incredible misery everywhere." Small farmers are selling their lands to buy what little food is available, he added.

The announcement that Viscount Archibald P. Wavell, Viceroy of India, would visit Bengal soon aroused hope that he would slash red tape to combine India's civil and military to combat the situation.

Mussolini Alone Betrayed Nation Into War, Badoglio Reveals, Reviewing Italy's Tragedy

By Mark S. Watson
(Copyright, 1943, Baltimore Sun.)
(Distributed by the Associated Press.)

Southern Italy, Oct. 23 (Delayed).—Marshal Pietro Badoglio today discussed the situation in his country, events which had brought it to pass, and his hopes for Italy's immediate future.

Transcending all other needs at the outset he said is the expulsion of the Germans. Next is the establishment of constitutional government, in the creation of which all political opinion in Italy must have a voice.

As soon as hostilities cease, Badoglio said he will surrender his office.

With great clarity, he touched on a sequence of hitherto little known events by which Benito Mussolini alone committed Italy to war in 1940 without the consent or even knowledge of his military chiefs who knew the nation's total unreadiness for grand scale war.

Appalling Decision

It is an appalling record of cold-blooded decision to buy power with Italian blood.

The veteran soldier pledged himself to include in his government all of Italy's established political parties now slowly recovering after long suppression by the Fascists. But their leading figures are now so scattered that a sound selection of representatives he regards as impossible until Rome is regained and they can enter public life again.

When such constitutional government is created, the marshal says his duty will be complete and he will immediately surrender office.

Italy's internal reforms, including the decision as to the form of the future government, must largely await action by this constitutional authority, he said. However, certain reforms calling for immediate action Badoglio himself initiated, he points out. These included destruction of the entire Fascist political machine all the way from the grand council and grafting corporation setups to particularly obnoxious Gioventu Italiana de Littorio—or the so called Littorio youth movement for boys 6 to 18.

Individual Punishment

Punishment of individual Fascists has not yet been determined upon, he said. Distinction must be made between, on one hand, real Fascist leaders and their trigger-men, who by implication must be punished, and on the other hand, minor government officials, clerks and professional men. These have had a choice between professing lip loyalty to Fascism and starving. One gathers these will be forgiven their merely perfunctory acceptance of Fascism and partly because a good many of them almost were necessary to the orderly restoration of the nation.

Mussolini himself had originally opposed entry into the war and changed his mind only when he thought German victory assured. He panted for an important place at the peace table as a belligerent and "needed some thousands of dead Italians" to buy that place, Badoglio said.

Tour of 5th Army Front Completed By Eisenhower

With the Fifth Army in Italy, Oct. 22 (Delayed) (P).—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, concluding a two-day inspection of the Fifth Army Front north of the Volturno River, saw today what appeared to be a battle developing in the high ground north and northwest of Ciazio, where the Germans had massed full infantry, artillery and armored forces.

Visiting front line command posts, he rode in a jeep with Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark and stopped to talk with Sgt. G. T. Moedinger, Barabod, Wis., who was engaged in the unenviable job of putting new rings in the engine of a jeep.

"How are things up here?" Eisenhower inquired.

"Not so bad now," Moedinger replied, "but you should have seen it a couple of days ago."

The general, talking with soldiers all along the line, asked about their food and received wholly favorable replies.

Coward Defends Song as Satire

London, Oct. 24 (P).—Playwright Noel Coward defended his new song, "Don't Let's Be Beastly to the Germans," today as "satire, as vitriolic and bitter as I could make it," aimed at "moralists and sentimentalists."

Coward sang it over the radio three months ago, provoking a storm of criticism.

New U. S. Submarine Dorado Reported Lost

Loss of the United States submarine Dorado, launched only last May, was reported yesterday by the Navy.

Communique No. 476 said: "The U. S. Submarine Dorado is overdue and must be presumed to be lost. The next of kin of personnel in the Dorado have been so informed."

While the announcement contained no reference to where the loss occurred, it was presumed the action was in the Pacific.

The Dorado was the thirteenth

American submarine lost since America's entry into the war. Of this total, Navy records list 2 sunk, 10 overdue and presumed lost and 1 destroyed to prevent enemy capture.

The Dorado was commanded by Lieut.-Comdr. Earle Caffrey Schneider 31, of Locust Knoll, Arnold, Md.

The normal complement of the Dorado was 65.

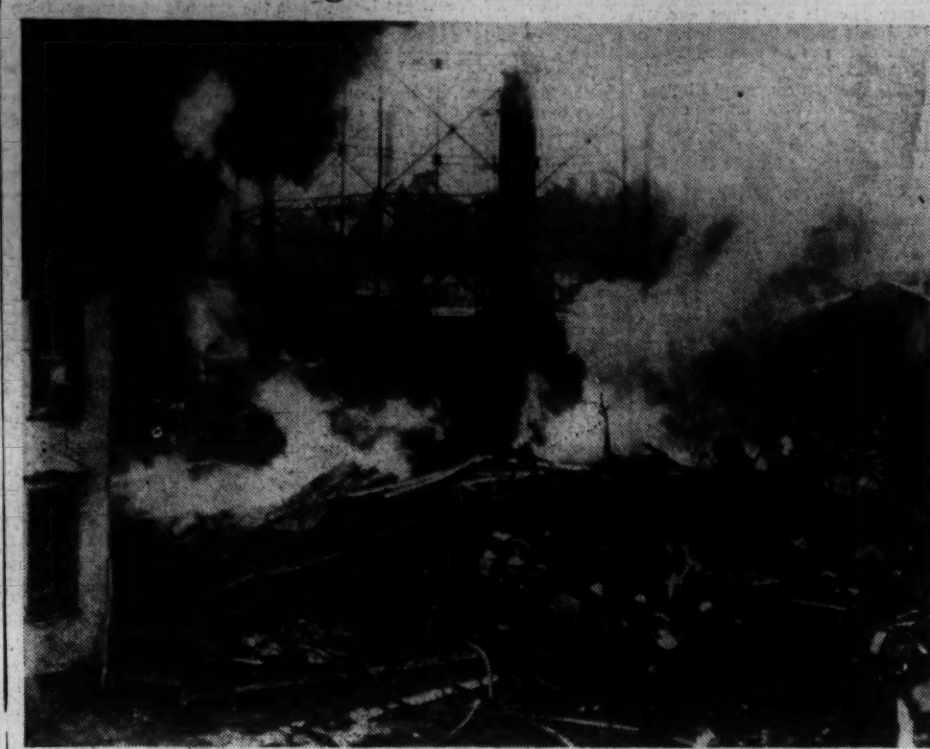

The submarine was of 1525 tons displacement, 307 feet long and carried 10 21-inch torpedo tubes. It was launched May 23 at the yards of the Electric Boat Co., Groton, Conn. The sponsor was Mrs. Eric G. Allen of Washington, wife of Rear Admiral Allen.

Schneider was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1933. He was awarded the Silver Star last April for "gallantry and intrepidity in action" while serving aboard another submarine in the Pacific.

The citation said his action materially aided in the success of his submarine's war patrol which sank an important amount of Japanese shipping. He assumed command of the Dorado while she was being fitted out last spring.

A PLEDGE OF FAITH

to those with impaired hearing, their families, friends and employers

It is significant that National Hearing Week this year comes on the 10th Anniversary of SONOTONE's conception of personalized responsibility in dealing with the hard of hearing public.

During these 10 years of SONOTONE's acknowledged leadership there has been a great change in America's understanding of the problems involved in the loss of hearing. Revolutionary advances in the design and in the individualized fitting of hearing aids, many of them originating in the SONOTONE research laboratories, have assured improved hearing to many, many more people than ever before.

To that faithful army of men and women who, as SONOTONE consultants, have devoted their every waking hour to the assistance of the hard of hearing, it has long been evident that a hearing aid ALONE is not enough. Improved hearing is not a matter merely of putting on a hearing aid, but of careful, experienced fitting to start with... of sympathetic, heartfelt understanding of the personal problems involved... of wise, considerate guidance during the difficult days of readjustment... and of unflinching attention to make sure that hearing is uninterrupted!

SONOTONE has always recognized a vital responsibility that goes far beyond the mere sale of an instrument. Increasing war-time impairment of people's hearing now accentuates that responsibility. And in the name of the hundreds of sincere and devoted men and women in SONOTONE'S 145 offices I accept the increased opportunity for service to our nation and renew our 10-year-old pledge of making every possible effort to insure that each SONOTONE wearer gets the best, clearest and most dependable hearing that present-day science can give.

Sincerely yours,

Dean Babbitt

Somewhere in New Guinea, Oct. 24 (UPI)—Ensign Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt of the United States Navy, one of America's wealthiest young men, was revealed today to be in action against the Japanese.

He has been under fire, in his first brush with the enemy serving aboard a tiny craft which was crippled by a Japanese plane. Vanderbilt, who has been known for his fondness for PT boats, was disclosed to be serving as "an executive officer aboard a light United States naval craft."

On his first patrol in these waters an enemy plane attacked his craft with such ferocity and from such a low altitude "that it narrowly missed his head."

His crippled vessel was towed to shore. It now is back in action. The 31-year-old Vanderbilt last year inherited $5,000,000 to add to the $10,000,000 he already had.

Lippmann Receives
'Freedom Award'
From Willkie

New York, Oct. 23.—Wendell L. Willkie presented tonight to Walter Lippmann, special writer for the New York Herald Tribune and The Washington Post, the first annual "freedom award" given by Freedom House, to "an American who has made an outstanding contribution to the cause of freedom." The award was made at the second anniversary dinner of Freedom House at the Hotel Astor.

Willkie stressed the need of Americans for "a great educational process—not alone about the world around us, but about our relationship to the world"—and said Lippmann has been one of the country's "most effective teachers," both through his column and in his recent book, "U. S. Foreign Policy: Shield of the Republic."

Senate Likely to Ban Subsidies
On Food, Roosevelt Warned

By Francis J. Kelly
Associated Press Staff Writer

One of President Roosevelt's long-standing friends on Capitol Hill has cautioned him that a majority of the Senate not only opposes continuation and expansion of the food subsidy program but apparently is in the mood to pass ant subsidy legislation, even over his veto.

So tightly do the interests of Democratic Senators from the rural South dovetail with those of the Republicans from the Midwest farm area, this lawmaker said, that it is hard to imagine how the coalition could be disrupted by anything the President might say in his food price subsidy message, expected this week.

A bill forbidding subsidies to keep down retail food prices already has been approved by the House Banking Committee and is expected to be acted upon by the Representatives early next month. The bill continues the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation from December 31 to July 1, 1945, but does not grant the extra 500-million-dollar borrowing power which the Administration asked for the CCC. It also prohibits fixing ceilings below support prices.

Congressional rejection of the subsidy ban was called for by the National Lawyers Guild in a statement yesterday. The organization declared that unless subsidies are used to strengthen price control, the stability of the Nation's economy will be threatened by constantly increasing prices—"thus opening the floodgates to inflation and endangering the country's war effort."

"The ill-advised action of the House Committee, unless reversed

by Congress, will cost consumers from 10 to 15 billion dollars, will give impetus to a wave of demands for wage increases and start a disastrous inflationary cycle," the guild said.

The President's hold-the-line order on the cost of living is at issue in the developing battle. Price Administration officials say it will be impossible to roll back food prices to the level of September 15, 1942, without subsidies.

It is likely that legislation to force an increase in the price of milk may be attached as a rider to the CCC bill when it comes before the Senate.

Billion Rubles

Moscow, Oct. 24 (AP)—Claims of the Allies against Germany and her satellites will total from 800 billion to one trillion golden rubles, the magazine War and The Working Class said today. (The ruble has a nominal value of 19 cents.)

The article said most of the indemnity would be claimed by the Soviet Union, which would not want payment "in money, but in kind."

"It would be expedient to attract workers from Germany to restore the devastated provinces in the postwar period," it added. "The Germans will have to restore destroyed bridges, railways and plants."

Reds Plunge Past Melitopol; Kill 2000 Nazis

The Russian now have completed 15 weeks of steady fighting since their big counteroffensive began last July 12, and the last week has been described in reports filtering out of Germany as Adolf Hitler's blackest of the war.

The German high command acknowledged Russian gains in the loop, and a Berlin broadcast said Nazi troops in front of Krivoriog had been "withdrawn to the rear as a result of enemy pressure."

New and violent Soviet attempts to break through German lines between the Sea of Azov and Zaporozhe were frustrated in bitter fighting," the German communiqué said.

German Evacuation

A broadcast by the mysterious underground radio station Atlantique, also announced the German evacuation of Dnepropetrovsk, metallurgical city in the upper corner of the Dnieper loop. The city already had been flanked on the west. Other Soviet units reached its east bank suburbs weeks ago. At Melitopol, the Russian newspaper Ivestia said, "not one live German remains in the town. The dead ones can be counted by the thousands."

The German command disclosed another Soviet army on the central front far to the north had been attacking German lines before Vitebsk and Orsha for the third successive day.

Allied military men in Moscow termed the Melitopol breakthrough one of the finest Russian feats of the war.

Moscow said the Germans were getting panicky in the Crimea, and that they now must decide

2 Million More Reds Seen Poised for Battle

Madrid, Oct. 24 (AP).—In a gloomy report direct from Berlin, the correspondent of a Madrid newspaper wrote today "it is evident that the Soviet winter army has not yet entered battle, and there are people here who estimate the strength of this force at two million men."

quickly whether to stand or flee from that peninsula.

The Crimean garrison has been estimated at 100,000. Should the Germans try to hold, they will be surrounded, then exposed to both land assaults across the Perekop Isthmus and to amphibious operations on all sides by Soviet Black Sea naval forces.

Even if the Germans decide to abandon the Crimea, their dilemma still is a black one. They can try to hold the lower Dnieper from its Black Sea mouth near Kherson northeastward to Nikopol. But that is an extremely dangerous position in view of the Russian scythe swinging down behind them inside the Dnieper loop.

The next alternative is a retreat westward to the Bug River, much less tenable than the broad Dnieper, which the Germans failed to hold.

Opening of New Plant Makes Higgins Happy

New Orleans, Oct. 24 (AP).—Bluff Andrew J. Higgins appeared a happy man today at formal dedication ceremonies here of the huge plant of Higgins Aircraft, Inc., as he declared it "was completed far ahead of schedule and the cost was kept within the original estimate of 27 million dollars."

The specific purpose of the plant is to supply the United States with cargo planes, described by Higgins officials as the largest two-engine aircraft made.

"positive results" and now "has entered a new phase in the tripartite conference."

The conference, it said, "will have to overcome difficulties which are not minor" but "will fulfill its important mission of breaking down the enemy's calculations for prolonging the war."

As the Allied nations have joined efforts on the grounds of common, friendly cooperation for the solution of postwar problems which already have arisen."

The "first real problem," however, is to work for shortening the war, it added.

Reflecting an apparent growing Russian trust of her allies, the magazine said a complete understanding was necessary to future world peace and made clear that neither the United States, Soviet Russia nor Great Britain—nor a combination of any two of them—should attempt to stand alone.

Tobacco Quota Continuance Wins By Heavy Vote

Growers have approved a proposal of the War Food Administration to continue Federal marketing quotas on burley tobacco for another three years.

Nearly complete returns from Saturday's referendum gave 88,481 votes for quotas on the 1944, 1945 and 1946 crops and 6560 against, a majority of 93 per cent. A favorable vote of at least two-thirds of those voting was required.

Quotas, last approved in 1940 for a period ending with the 1943 crop, are designed to prevent an over expansion in tobacco production at the expense of essential war food crops.

However, growers will be permitted to plant 20 per cent more land to burley and flue-cured tobacco—types used principally in cigarettes—because of a sharp increase in demand both here and in Great Britain.

YOU CAN HELP

KEEP THE SHIPS MOVING DOWN THE WAYS TO VICTORY

One of Baltimore's biggest shipyards needs men—urgently—to help with the vitally important job of building cargo ships, tankers and transports. This need is YOUR opportunity—your chance to earn good money while making a real, ESSENTIAL contribution to the war effort.

Earn while you learn—No experience is necessary. You pick out a job—learn it under our training program—and get paid while learning. Starting rates are good. Average weekly earnings, taken for all workers in the yard, are excellent. If you are skilled in a shipyard trade—but not already in an essential job—you are of course more than welcome, and will earn extra-high wages.

Housing near yard—For shipyard workers there are new apartments, fifteen minutes away. Rentals are $34 per month for room, kitchen and bath; $36 for two rooms, kitchen and bath; $38 for three rooms, kitchen and bath. Gas and electricity included.

Soldiers of production—Take your place in the patriotic ranks of the production army! Not only does your country need you—but this chance is one you can't afford to miss. There are real opportunities for advancement among the jobs offered. This shipyard has been in operation for 55 years. Many employees who worked there during the first World War are still on the job.

Visit U. S. Employment Office—At the U. S. Employment Service office, Fifth and K Streets, N. W. (telephone DIstrict 7000), company representatives will give you full information about these jobs. Bring your Social Security card, and, if available, birth or baptismal record. Office open 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. daily.

(Please do not apply if already in an essential job.)

*DIXIN—Amazing New Beard Softening Ingredient Used Exclusively in New Krank's SHAVE-KREEM

- ① Saves up to 1/3 Shaving Time
- ② Saves Blades and Money
- ③ Gives Smoother, More Comfortable, Quicker Shaves

Here's What It Is: According to scientific excavations in ancient Babylonia, men have been shaving for more than 3000 years. During that period of time, there have been perhaps only 4 basic improvements (including Dixin) in the art of shaving. (1) First men discovered that water (and later soap with it) helped to soften the beard. (2) Then came perfected razors—straight edge and later safety razors. (3) In 1910 A. J. Krank perfected the first brushless shaving cream—did away with messy brush. (4) In 1943 sensational Dixin—super-speedy beard softener is discovered and made a part of Krank's Brushless Shave-Kream.

Extra Fast and Easy to Use. Laboratory technicians say that Dixin almost instantly makes tough beard hair "a supple hygroscopic wick." This means that Dixin dissolves in the oily film which coats the beard-hair and permits the hair to rapidly absorb the moist part of the Kream. This results in softening the beard hair almost instantaneously. Your razor can then cut the soft hair easily and speedily. Actual tests show that Krank's Brushless Shave-Kream containing Dixin makes the beard soft and easy to shave in up to one-third the time usually consumed by ordinary soaps or creams. You'll find, too, that Krank's Shave-Kream easily rinses off of your razor—it is not greasy. Krank's Shave-Kream is the only Shave Cream which contains Dixin.

Money-Back Guarantee Try Krank's TODAY!

Get yourself a jar of this inexpensive new Krank Shave-Kream today. You'll see for yourself why it is truly sensational, and how Krank's with Dixin can give you an amazing new, fast, smooth shave. Use Krank's for seven days—if you are not delighted, your dealer will refund your money without question. Krank's prices are sensationally low, too: Giant ones pound size—only 60c. Big 1/2 pound size—only 35c; Travel size—only 25c. Start today—give yourself this new shaving pleasure and luxury!

Now—SHAVING LUXURY FOR LESS THAN 3 CENTS A WEEK

Dixin Registered Trade Mark for Dihydroxyacetone Ester Complex of Chlorinated Octadecanoic Acid.

...and Here's How It Works!

- 1 Man's beard is covered with a wiry, oil-coated sheath—tough as copper of equal thickness. This sheath must be quickly softened for clean, comfortable, smooth and fast shaving.
- 2 Krank Shave-Kream, with Dixin, almost instantaneously dissolves in the oily coating and permits beard to absorb moisture, soften, and become amazingly easy to shave.
- 3 Not only does Krank's make shaving faster, easier, and less expensive—it also leaves your skin feeling surprisingly soft and smooth. Krank's contains only pure, mild, soothing ingredients.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

IF EVER Wendell Willkie walked into a "lion's den," it was when he addressed 100 GOP Congressmen the other night. The majority, including the 65 GOP "freshmen" who arranged the meeting, seethed with hostility. Not a few came with the intention of jeering, but almost to a man, they stayed to cheer.

Willkie opened the off-the-record meeting by telling his listeners that a grass-roots canvass of the Nation had convinced him he could have the Republican nomination again in 1944, if he wanted it. He stated this as a fact, with no seeming conceit, but with a disarming frankness that charmed the GOP politicians instead of antagonizing them.

"However, I will tell you very frankly," he continued, "unless the party has the kind of platform that will show we are conscious of the fact that the United States can no longer live as a nation isolated from the rest of the world, I will not accept the nomination."

He added that if he is to be the 1944 nominee, the platform must clearly call for U. S. collaboration with other nations to insure the future peace of the world. On domestic issues, he stated that there will be no return to reactionary, anti-labor policies of former GOP administrations if he is to lead the party.

"I understand there are a number of men here who want to ask me some embarrassing questions," Willkie declared after he had finished his opening statement. "Well, gentlemen, the only way you can embarrass me is by failing to ask those questions. I know what some of you have on your minds."

He then proceeded to inform his slightly baffled audience that certain members of the GOP Missouri delegation who were present had had several questions "planted" on them by Edgar Queneen, St. Louis munitions maker and a leading GOP financial "angel."

'Planted' Question
"One of the questions Mr. Queneen has requested that I be asked is—Will I support whoever is nominated by the party, if I do not win myself?" Willkie asserted, glancing pugnaciously from right to left.

His listeners turned questioning eyes on the Missouri Congressman present, including the acting chairman of the meeting, Representative Wai Arnold, of Kirksville. Suddenly, freshman Congressman Louis E. Miller of St. Louis jumped to his feet.

"No one told me to ask you any questions," shouted Miller. "By this time the meeting was on the verge of an uproar, but Willkie, unflinching, turned to Representative Arnold.

"How about you, Mr. Arnold? Weren't you requested to ask me that question?" "Yes, I'll have to admit that I was," replied Arnold with a sheepish grin.

There was a burst of laughter, but Willkie didn't join in it. In fighting tone, he continued: "Yes, and I can name some others here who were asked to put the same question to me. But I'll save you the trouble by answering it."

"My answer is—of course not. Of course, I will not support anyone who in my opinion isn't the right man to lead the Republican Party. I would not support Colonel McCormick of the Chicago Tribune, for instance, if he was nominated, or Representative Ham Fish, or anyone else like them."

The GOP leader was cheered and applauded frequently during the three-hour meeting, but this touched off the biggest ovation of all for an audience which numbered a hefty quota of isolationists. It was a strange spectacle. But Willkie wasn't through. He was equally frank in replying to other questions, including his position on Soviet Russia.

Attitude on Russia
"I am opposed to all foreign 'isms' for the reason that they deny liberty to the people living under them. I could never be for any system that would tolerate this. However, I want to make this reservation with regard to Soviet Russia, and I believe I know a little about it, having traveled there and met Joseph Stalin. No realist who is honest with himself can deny that the Russian system has been effective."

Willkie described the Russian people as honest and hard-working, but at the same time "the most oratorical people I have ever met."

Stalin, he said, did not talk in the picturesque, well rounded sentences historians of great men like to record, but that he was "direct and to the point and definite in his answers, when he chose to answer at all."

Willkie said he preferred not to criticize the Commander in Chief too much while the country was at war. However, he took a joint swing at Roosevelt and Churchill for not fulfilling their promise to Stalin of a second front in western Europe. This promise definitely had been made, he declared, but had not been kept.

All of this was behind closed doors. When the meeting was over, Willkie's collar was rumpled and his mop of hair disheveled, as after one of his 1940 political speeches, but his forthrightness had won him a lot of "GOP friends on Capitol Hill. As one former isolationist foe remarked:

"You have to hand it to the guy. He has lots of guts. If he had been as definite in his political speeches during the last campaign as he was tonight he would have won the election."

Newspapers' Aid In 3d Loan Drive Praised by Tripp

The impact of newspaper cooperation in the Third War Loan extends beyond the success of the loan itself to the very basis of the unified national war effort, Frank E. Tripp, chairman of the Allied Newspaper Council, said today.

"Its value to the armed forces at the front is incalculable," said the manager of the Gannett newspaper chain, who headed the newspaper group cooperating with the Treasury.

"Down to the smallest community, hundreds of messages entered every household and talked not alone of dollars needed but emphasized the importance of the people's support in every phase of the war."

Tripp reported 118 million lines of advertising went into the campaign, and more than 61,200,000 lines in news stories and other publicity.

President's Condition Now 'Much Better'

By the Associated Press

"The President is feeling pretty good and spent a fairly comfortable day," Dr. McIntire said.

British-U. S. Board Gloomy On Coal Output

Saying that the United Nations will barely squeeze through the winter on the basis of present coal production, joint British-American board predicted yesterday that "the supply is almost certain to be far less satisfactory a year from now."

The board's surveys of Allied coal supplies disclosed that prospects of obtaining a sufficient 1944 supply are dubious because of manpower and mining machinery shortages.

Highlights of the report, the second survey of raw materials (the first reported imminent shortages of pulp and paper) made by a combined committee of the Combined Production and Resources Board and the Combined Raw Materials Board:

British coal mines lack 30,000 miners to maintain adequate production.

U. S. Mines Lack Workers

U. S. coal mines are short 35,000 workers, and the mines are losing miners at the rate of 2500 a month.

Requirements for U. S. coal in 1943 will be 600 million tons of bituminous, and 1943 production is estimated at 590 million tons, leaving a gravely low stockpile of 40 million tons on January 1, 1944.

Minimum U. S. bituminous requirements in 1944 will be 620,000,000 tons, "and if present trends continue, output will fall far short of this amount."

Manufacturers are two months behind in filling orders for repair parts for mine machinery, six months behind in meeting requirements for replacement equipment.

British Mines Lagging
Mechanization of British mines is lagging, and production is being held down through lack of loading equipment. (British mines produce roughly 200,000,000 tons annually, with largely hand methods employing 704,000 men, while mechanized U. S. mines produce 600,000,000 tons with 400,000 men.)

The combined coal committee of CPRB and CRMB is headed by Howard A. Gray, deputy administrator of the Solid Fuels Administration, chairman, and Sir Henry Lyttelton, British Minister of Production.

U. S.-Britain Carry Load

The report noted that Britain and the U. S. are the main sources of coal open to the United Nations. India and South Africa are minor exporters of coal. Canada only produces a third of her own requirements, but is a supplier of critical stocks to our Pacific northwest.

The U. S. and Britain must shoulder the whole load in supply coal for operational purposes in the Mediterranean theater, Gray and Sir Henry said, and predicted that

With Marines

D. C. Writers' Adventures In War Told

The "fighter-writer" role of three Washington men and a former Congressman, all of them combat correspondents of the Marine Corps who are pushing into front-line battles in the Pacific area, was described in a letter received here yesterday from Master Technical Sgt. Jim Lucas of Oklahoma, now stationed in New Georgia.

"At the first battle of Bairoko, Corpl. James Carroll of Silver Spring, Md., a combat photographer who had been wounded earlier in the campaign by shrapnel from a Jap booby trap, did not take a picture. He was too busy carrying scores of wounded back of the lines, working for many hours without rest. Carroll is believed to have killed at least one, and perhaps many more Jap snipers."

On Rendova, Staff Sgt. Samuel Stavinsky, former assistant city editor of The Washington Post, is on the job, carrying out instructions given combat writers to be "Marines first and correspondents second," and to "drop typewriters and grab a gun in the thick of battle," Sergeant Lucas wrote.

Maj. Phil Ferguson, former representative of Oklahoma, was wounded near Bairoko and Corpl. George R. Gass of 770 Park rd. nw., a combat photographer, has clashed with Japanese armed patrols between Enogai and Bairoko.

Plane Damages Irish Ship at Sea

Dublin (Monday), Oct. 25 (AP).—The Elre ship Kerlogue reached Cork Harbor last night badly damaged by attack from an unidentified plane 120 miles off the Irish coast.

The captain and three others were wounded.

The Kerlogue, 1000 gross tons, left this neutral port October 20 for Oporto and was three days out when attacked.

this drain on total United Nations supply would be greatly increased in 1944, as the Allies "must make provision for the essential needs of Allied Nations in Europe still to be freed from the enemy."

The only hope for 1944 "requires that the loss of manpower in the mines be stopped forthwith, and that all possible steps be taken to replace the losses already sustained," the report declared.

radio announced, and later more big formations crossed Hungary's southwest borders to bomb Tans-Danubie.

The German radio said the attack was made under cover of a dense layer of clouds. It admitted "major damage to one point," despite bad weather over the Alps.

A force of 300 bombers and 200 fighter escorts was seen near Zagreb, German puppet capital of Croatia, which fired its guns later.

Kassel Declared Wiped Out, With 6000 Killed

Stockholm, Oct. 24 (AP)—At least 6000 persons were killed and few houses escaped damage in the RAF raid on Kassel Friday night, the newspaper Allehenda said today.

The dispatch described Kassel as "blasted from the earth's surface, with enormous fires raging . . . and terrified citizens leaving the burning hell in an endless caravan."

At 16 Allied planes, the German radio said. Budapest also had an alert.

In England, the big aerial news was the disclosure that the twin-engine, twin-tailed, extra long range P-38 Lightning fighters now were available for bomber escort. Believed carrying extra gas tanks, the Lightnings, which can make 400 miles an hour and carry a cannon and four .50-caliber machine guns, will be capable of reaching Berlin. They have even longer range than the Thunderbolts, which on September 27 escorted Flying Fortresses 800 miles to Emden and back. The Lightnings are expected to make more than 1100-mile round trips, giving medium bombers the protection needed for distant attacks.

The Lightnings, the first fighters used by the Eighth Air Force, escorted Flying Fortresses on two raids on Europe a year ago and then the force shifted to North Africa for the Allied landing while high-altitude, single-engine Thunderbolts took their place. Both were believed a match for anything the Germans had.

In a foray over London Saturday night, the Nazis did a little damage in outlying areas. The German radio reported showering high explosives and incendiaries on Great Yarmouth, losing two bombers—possibly one-tenth of the whole force.

Police Enter Hunt For Missing Alexandria Girl

Police have instituted a search for Mae Stanley, 16, missing from her home, Route 1, Alexandria, since Monday.

Relatives said the girl had disappeared from home once before, about six months ago. At that time Alexandria police picked her up at the Greyhound bus terminal after she had been gone two days.

MAE STANLEY Her uncle, George Gilk, with whom she made her home, is ill in Alexandria Hospital and relatives said his condition had been aggravated by worry over the missing niece.

Miss Stanley who, it was said, also may go under the name of Mae Gilk, was described as being about 5 feet 4 inches tall, having dark brown hair and brown eyes and wearing a brown plaid suit when last seen. Information concerning her may be addressed to Box 663, Alexandria, Va.

troops, armor, and equipment into the line, fought doggedly and dynamited a number of bridges.

An advance across the lowlands immediately beyond the Trigno would put the British astride the important lateral highway from Vasto southwest through Castiglione to a junction with the Foglia-Rome highway near Isernia.

Once that road is gained, the Germans would lose an exceedingly valuable communications route between their lines, and Montgomery would be in position to threaten the flank and rear of the strong infantry and artillery units resisting the Allied advance along the Foglia-Rome road from Vinchiaturo.

causing large explosions and a fire. The ship was sailing in a small convoy.

Allied fighters attacking Kahili airbase on Bougainville Island were intercepted by 20 enemy planes, three of which were shot down. One Allied plane was missing.

Marked improvement in the ground situation at Finschhafen was noted.

Japs Driven Back

"The enemy's efforts to break through to the coast north of Finschhafen, apparently for the purpose of escape evacuation or of sea supply, have terminated," the communique said. "He has now fallen back, based on the hills, where his supply routes to the north are difficult and precarious. His forces are weak in numbers and of little significance."

Six enemy planes made a weak raid on Finschhafen at dawn. Off Choiseul, north-central Solomons, a night reconnaissance plane attacked an enemy corvette, leaving it settling by the stern.

Knox Cites War Need Of British-U.S. Unity

Williamstown, Mass. Oct. 24 (AP)—Navy Secretary Knox declared today the interdependence of the British Empire and the United States was the "greatest factor that will contribute to our ultimate victory."

Speaking at the 150th anniversary commencement exercises at Williams College, which has 90 percent of its student body in uniform as naval officer candidates, Knox asserted that "we must learn to work and fight together as one people and that is just as important to apply to the American people as it is to the British."

Post Want Ads Bring Results

In more ways than one, the Burbank family of Bedford Hills, N. Y., are looking ahead. They know the kind of future they want in the Post War World and they are working hard to make it come true. You can do as they are doing.

Seven Practical Things the Burbanks Are Doing to Win Their Personal Post War World

They are things you, too, can do

EVERETT BURBANK is busier than ever these war days. He still found time for such a successful Victory garden that he built a root cellar to store some of the surplus.

That kind of "weather eye" on the future is typical of most of us Americans. We have in mind a Post War World in which we are going to enjoy many of the good things of life . . . and we're working now to win them.

All of us, like the Burbanks, can keep a weather eye on the future. We can follow a practical seven-point program which our Government recommends. Here it is:

1. Buy and hold war bonds—to lend our country the money it needs now to fight the war to Victory.
2. Pay willingly your share of taxes—including increased taxes—that our country needs.
3. Provide for your own and your family's future by adequate life insurance and savings.
4. Reduce your debts as much as possible and avoid making needless new ones.
5. Buy only what you need and make what you have last longer.
6. Live faithfully by the rationing rules to conserve goods of which there are shortages.
7. Cooperate with our Government's price and wage stabilization program.

This is a wartime plan of action for Victory and the peace to follow. But it is nothing really new for Americans—who are used to following the road of hard work and thrift to freedom and personal security. That's the spirit our fathers planted deep in our soil before we became a nation.

But these seven things will not only work for the better future we want. Right now they will go into action to hold down prices—to prevent that uncontrolled rise in the cost of living that would hurt all of us and help none of us.

Why not, if you are not already doing so, do these seven practical things? A good way to begin is to work out a budget, using the form shown here. It can be your guide to a better tomorrow.

AMERICA'S LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES bring you this plan of action not only to help you to win the kind of future you want, but to urge you to join wholeheartedly with all loyal Americans to keep down living costs during these critical war days.

By acquiring life insurance, with the guidance of their life insurance agents, 67 million policyholders have already joined together in taking one of the effective steps our Government suggests.

Remember that the premiums you pay for your life insurance are also helping to pay for the war—for a large part of them are invested in Government bonds.

LET'S FACE THE FACTS

About the Food Shortage

A Report to the WINS (millions of Women in National Service) Reprinted from October Ladies' Home Journal in the Interest of the FOOD FOR FREEDOM PROGRAM.

So many stores, schools, industries, clubs found this recent Journal material of special help and interest that we are gladly reprinting it here to extend its usefulness to any organization or individual who wishes it for reproduction or display this month.* The chart, Ten Rules for Wartime Eating, and little-known facts about U. S. food are quoted in abridged form from the Journal's Report to the WINS—the housewives of America, the largest army on the home front who are banded together to study all problems of wartime conservation and do everything possible to win the war from inside the walls of America's homes. Millions of them—enough to bring this magazine the largest audited circulation of ANY magazine—saw it in the October

FOOD FIGHTS FOR FREEDOM

10 RULES for wartime eating

- 1 Keep a list of the seven basic food groups in your kitchen and your purse. Follow it when you plan and when you buy. Substitute within groups.
- 2 Don't plan to serve meat, fish or poultry—eggs and cheese all the same day.
- 3 Start the day off right with a breakfast that counts as a real meal. Make cereal with milk the "main dish."
- 4 Make a hearty soup, or cereal with fruit and milk, your main dish at lunch or supper at least twice a week.
- 5 Don't waste. Try foods new to you. Eat fresh foods first. Conserve canned supplies. Use bread crumbs in stuffings, bones in soup, remnants of meat or vegetables in stews. Watch the peelings. Cook potatoes in skins.
- 6 Help your grocer cut down waste. Don't pinch fruits. Don't toss over vegetables.
- 7 Start a clean-plate club in your home. Serve smaller portions. Eat it all.
- 8 Save fats by serving fewer fried foods and rich pastries.
- 9 Spread the load. Include all different mainstay foods in weekly meal plans: eggs; fish; cheese; beans; poultry; meat.
- 10 Don't buy food with ration stamps just for the sake of using up the stamps. Don't trade stamps with your neighbor.

"Hitler would laugh his fool head off if he collected garbage over here . . . From our kitchens we throw away 4 billion dollars' worth of edible food a year . . . $32 worth a person or four times the amount we sent lend-lease abroad in 1942 . . . Add waste in distribution and it is as much as we provide for all our fighting forces and allies . . . Bread is our biggest waste—one slice per family or 2,000,000 loaves a week . . . Half of all waste is in the home which puts a tremendous strain upon our food supply . . . We can win the war and help your family live better for instance: . . . Take meats and fats, our greatest shortages . . . Most of us waste ½ ounce of fat a week or as much as our whole army used last year—So why can't we sop up gravy, tip soup plates, pick bones clean? . . . In bulk greatest waste is our greatest dietary lack—fruits and green vegetables . . . Do you know the higher vitamin value of outside leaves and potato skins? Farm production has been handicapped by bad weather—lack of labor—inadequate supplies . . . Anticipated 5% increase may not be realized—War needs are 25%—Hence those ration cards . . . They may not work if some folks don't play fair . . . A black market is the dealer who buys war-scarce products from a food bootlegger—and YOU who buy them from him at higher than ceiling prices or without surrendering ration points . . . We must obey the rules or play a guilty role."

Dogs Bite 8 More in D. C. And Vicinity

Precinct police stations reported many inquiries during the day about the new order that dogs be muzzled. Scout car officers were not picking up unmuzzled dogs immediately but were giving a warning first, since many dog owners did not know about the new regulation. Scout cars, however, are not usually equipped to pick up stray dogs, and in most cases have been notifying the pound.

All but one of those bitten yesterday were children.

Betty Jane Kocher, while using a play ground in the rear of her home, was bitten on the right leg above the ankle by an unlicensed dog, whose owner, police said, was Marvin B. Weaver, 2714 30th st. se. According to police, Weaver was notified to post $5 collateral for having an unlicensed dog.

Gwendolyn Cavanaugh was treated at Providence Hospital for a dog bite on her lower lip. She was bitten by a brown police dog while walking in the 3400 block of Clay st. ne. Lewis Ensminger reported that while walking west in the 200 block of L st. ne, he was bitten on the right knee by a stray dog. The boy was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Also treated at Casualty Hospital for dog bites on the right knee and right middle finger was Donald Hurowitz, who was with his father at 1117 B st. ne, when he was attacked.

Bernice Cash, bitten in the back of the right knee by a stray dog at the corner of 18th st. and Florida ave. nw., was treated at Garfield Hospital. John Spriggs received at Georgetown Hospital after he was bitten on the right forefinger by a small brown and white mongrel while walking west on N st. between Potomac ave. and 33rd st. nw.

Police also received the report yesterday of a leashed dog being bitten by another. Miggle, a scottie, who was out with her owner, Louis Stephen Mamakos, 10, of 1247 Holbrook terrace ne., was attacked by a brown mongrel, which was later handed over to the pound by police.

In Falls Church, Va., police said they were contemplating revising an ordinance which would enable them to curb stray dogs. They said they had been getting an average of four and five complaints daily.

John Bodkins, owner of the Idlewood Farm in Fairfax County, Va., reported to police that a dog had killed 25 of his chickens Saturday night and 18 of them Wednesday night. He said he found dog tracks around the chicken house. An immediate investigation was started by Fairfax County Police.

The last rabies epidemic period in the District, Health Department officials said, was from 1923 through 1931, when 531 dogs and cats were diagnosed as having rabies and 418 persons were bitten by these animals. The worst year was said to be 1926, when 147 infected animals bit 123 persons.

Provides Temporary Care

Washington Home for Foundlings is a nonsectarian home which provides temporary care for children whose homes have been broken up by illness, death, or some other emergency where lack of finances makes other assistance necessary. Children admitted spend their first two weeks in the isolation section until various health tests have been made and then are assigned to one of the three different departments, depending on their ages. To them will go $23,618 of the Washington quota.

Another group supported by the fund, the Boy Scouts, offers boys of every race, color or creed a program of outdoor activities and training in innumerable skills. Boy Scouts also render aid in emergency situations. Their fund quota is $38,262.

The USO, still another fund activity, which aids both men and women of the armed forces, has just announced the opening of its 2550th center. With other war hospitality, the USO accounts for $1,158,805 of the Washington quota.

An American Classic for over 100 Years!

WAR CONDITIONS are a challenge to quality... the sternest test any house can face.

Park & Tilford is successfully meeting this wartime challenge today.

For, whether in war or peace, quality is basic with Park & Tilford. It is the cornerstone of our policy... a policy that has enjoyed the nation's confidence for 103 years.

This very fact has created an unprecedented demand for Park & Tilford

Whiskies. To meet this demand we are using our vast reserves. The five Park & Tilford Distilleries cannot add to these reserves because they are producing war-alcohol exclusively.

Occasionally, therefore, there will be a shortage of Park & Tilford Whiskies at your dealer's.

But remember this: we are apportioning our whiskies as fairly as possible. And while there must be a limitation of quantity, you may be confident there will be no curtailment of quality!

War Surpluses

By Roger W. Babson

Problem Must Be Faced Now

At the end of World War I the Government held a bag containing five billion dollars worth of goods of every kind and description. We all remember the so-called "Army and Navy Stores" which for more than 20 years disposed of a portion of these goods. Undoubtedly they were a nuisance to old-line established retail stores. These Army and Navy Stores seemed to have a never-ending inventory.

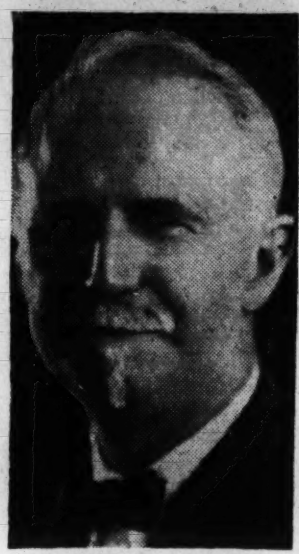

The great bulk of the five billion dollars surplus was bought up by mail-order houses and speculators at private sales or at auctions. Through catalogues and low-rent stores these goods were then resold to the general public at considerably less than retail prices for similar goods. It took from one war to another to clean out Army and Navy inventories of these materials. Few, if any, of them were adapted to the needs of World War II. Probably little of the surplus which remains at the end of this war will be retained by the Army and Navy.

Hence, the Government will be faced with another great problem of disposal. World War I excess supplies brought about 35 cents on the dollar cost. I should judge that the Government will take another loss and this time a greater loss because of the larger quantity involved. Such losses, however, are all a legitimate charge against the cost of running a war. Washington should not be criticized for disposing of these goods at cut rates. However, steps should be taken to protect existing retailers from unfair competition.

It is estimated that when World War II ends the surplus goods and materials owned by the Army and Navy will have a value of at least five times that of the "odds and ends" which existed at the close of World War I. This means some 25 billion dollars worth of items. Consumers, wholesalers, jobbers, manufacturers, mail-order houses and retailers are all vitally concerned in this. To some groups it means good business. To others, and particularly to retailers, the effect may be bad. Obviously, these materials should not be dumped upon the market hastily.

Legislation is already proposed, calling for a study as to ways and means by which these surplus goods may best be disposed of. Some Representatives want the entire matter placed under the control of the Budget Bureau. Others seek to establish a custodian of surplus property. I strongly advise that retailers band together and insist that their consumers goods markets remain free from any unfair competition which in the end would hurt consumers as well. Congressmen ought to be fairly busy with this!

Already the Army is releasing certain consumer items. These include clothing, shoes, kitchen utensils and certain supplies which now have no direct military value. The Army has more of these kinds of goods on hand for current sale than does the Navy. Sales by the

ROGER W. BABSON

Navy, for the present at least, are being confined to raw materials, scrap and machinery. All these articles are first offered to other Government agencies. If these agencies are not interested, the goods are then sold through the Procurement Division of the Treasury.

Manufacturers, as well as retailers, may be interested in securing lists of what is now available from Procurement Division Offices in Boston, New York, Atlanta, Washington, Cincinnati and Fort Worth. Most of the Army sales are made upon a negotiated basis; but the Navy usually insists upon sealed bids.

In certain instances the WPB has allocated Navy surplus to manufacturers who are in need of them. Any manufacturer engaged in war production who is presently cramped for machinery and supplies of raw materials might do well to contact WPB regional offices to see what is on hand. Prices have been running close to the cost of the materials involved.

In time of war, as we know it today, the Army and Navy buy and use practically every kind of material that is necessary to civilian life. This brings about shortages in consumers goods but in turn surpluses are very apt to result.

My own suggestion to relieve the situation as it continues to develop is to include these surplus goods under lend-lease and after the war to get rid of the balance through direct foreign sales. This would leave our domestic retail outlets free from unfair competition and introduce some of our foreign goods at extremely low costs to certain nations to which the war may not have brought them.

N. Y. Exchange Sells Billion In War Bonds

By Frank MacMillen

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—If the New York Stock Exchange was still in the doghouse with the National Administration and parts of the populace as a lingering aftermath of the crash of 1929, it should kick the door off and come out after its performance in helping sell the third war loan.

Members of the Exchange, their partners and employees sold $1,040,037,518 of war bonds during the drive, employing their security selling experience and machinery without compensation. They more than doubled their sales made in the second loan drive last spring.

Overall Figure
The Stock Exchange announced the total today. It is an overall figure embracing not only sales made in New York and vicinity but throughout all the States where Stock Exchange firms operate their branch offices.

That is no mean total. Sales of only four individual States, New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania and Ohio, each exceeded it and a list of 19 States lumped together failed to reach a figure equalling it.

To do it the exchange firms put more than 5000 people, about 20 per cent of their entire force throughout the country, to work looking for customers for Uncle Sam, and devoted much of the time of their remaining employees and executives to the drive.

Tribute Is Paid
Keynote to the new warmth in the Washington-Wall Street atmosphere was sounded at the beginning of the campaign when Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau told members of the exchange in a speech from the rostrum that at the outbreak of the European phase of the war he had counseled President Roosevelt against closing the exchange, as had been done in World War I.

Morgenthau quoted himself: "Mr. President, on the financial front, I don't know anything which would better show our enemies how strong we are financially than to keep the New York Stock Exchange and other exchanges open, come hell or high water; and I am glad to be here and pay tribute to the New York Stock Exchange that they have taken the war in their stride."

It requires no long memory of financial affairs to see this as a significant change in atmosphere.

Ringside Table

With Mary Harris

THE NEPTUNE ROOM will present a brace of star musical teams next Saturday. They're Leslie and Lee Miller, piano-organ swingers, direct from Rio and making their American premiere at Neptune—and the musical team of Harris and Allen. A former "Harmonica Rascal" is Ed Harris, and his girl partner, Allen, is fresh from a theater tour wherein she was billed as the "madcap pianist." All this is pleasant news, except that it leaves us only a few days more to enjoy Henry Day's crew and Kay Erden.

Svelte Gertrude Bond, direct from Manhattan's El Morocco, will make her bow at Olmsted's Club tonight. She's supposed to be an elegant show stealer; will have to really test her mettle with Patricia Bright and Hal Yates.

AN AFTERNOON CIRCUS is the customer participation broadcast that goes on at Treasure Island every afternoon between 4:30 and 5 with Rocco Terrone supplying the music, Russ Hodges the gags, and the cocktail sippers putting in their two bits' worth. Many local notable bistro figures have been dropping in for the fun, including Art Brown of the radio and Capitol Theater, and the Profile of Fate Young's Sonny Collette from Kavakos Grill. . . . Today we hear that Sasha Lucas, forthcoming maestro of the Old New Orleans, will drop in and give his fiddle a Treasure Island workout.

TWO ADMIRALS and their ladies smiled at Walter O'Keefe's pungent wit from the Troika ringside the other eve. They were Admiral and Mrs. Clark H. Woodward and Admiral and Mrs. Thomas B. Richey. Also there was Capt. Don Smith, who commanded the destroyer Wasp when it went down fighting.

It's a first anniversary party at Restaurant "400" tonight with Masee Joe Moss beaming happily over the scene. Carlos and Melissa, an exceptionally delightful pair of young Latinos, will join the "400" entertaining crew this evening.

FLOOR SHOW FLASHES—Burton's Birds, a fascinating group of feathered friends, are held over at Lotus. New today will be dancers Zita and Young and Tapstress Jane Weber. . . . Most flirtatious floor show costume around is Lola's version of a Russian Sadie Thompson get-up at the Balalaika. It's a whirl of feathers, mesh hose and red garters. . . . Princess Red Rock, now at Casino Royal, is a full-blooded Indian, but she's beautifully gracious and suave as a mistress of ceremonies.

AN ENTERPRISING YOUNG FELLOW is Eddie Fogel, 22, whose sparkly dance music is a potent new attraction at the Dubonnet. In the daytime he makes precision instruments vital to the war effort for the Carnegie Institution. Also an immediate hit at Dubonnet is Tony Lanasa, whose fine baritone is equally effective in "Paper Doll" and the "Desert Song."

Flying music makers are Denny Beckner, singer Doris and five of the Beckner musicians now playing in the Victory Room. They all hold pilot's licenses, expect to tour by plane after the war.

MISSIE'S DEPARTMENT. Betty McHugh, with Bill Grassick's band at the Metronome Room, won two live chickens as first prize when she made her singing debut at an amateur contest. The McHugh family had a grand chicken dinner. . . . Kay Allen, artful singer with Carlos Molina's band at Del Rio, would make a lovely pin-up girl. . . . Elaine Moore of the King Cole Room not only sings like a cherub but looks like one in her pale blue formal. . . . Mattie, the caramel sweet singer of the Windsor Room, will probably acquire a radio spot—and soon.

UNBELIEVABLE! Myles Hallitt of Cafe Caprice will soon have

Take a trip on this Tragic "Magic Carpet"

- 1 You land first, let's say, in Athens. You're walking down the street. A sick child collapses before your eyes. If, in your pocket, you had the medicine to save her, would you give it? Would you? You would!
- 2 Or you're on a mountain road in Yugoslavia. It's ankle deep in snow, and knife-sharp rutted ice tears at the half bare feet of the guerilla fighter struggling on his way. On his way—if you please—to blow up a railroad bridge and plunge a trainload of Nazi troops and supplies to destruction. Would you give him a pair of shoes to help him on his mission? Would you? And how would you?
- 3 The magic carpet whisks you, this time, right back here to our town for the moment. A scared, sullen girl stands before a magistrate. Another case of war-time "juvenile delinquency." Father in service. Mother in a factory. Clearly a girl who needs help, guidance, counsel. Would you give it if you could? Well, you can!
- 4 All aboard . . . for the South Pacific. A God-forsaken post populated mostly with Marines and mosquitoes. It's raining. There's nothing to do between sessions of killing Japs. Suppose you could provide the boys with a swell show . . . one of Hollywood's top-flight entertainers, in the flesh. And pass out cigarettes, chocolate, "cokes." Give a party for the guys who are fighting your fight. Would you? You would!
- 5 Next stop . . . China. The rubbled remains of a little village visited once again by the "Sons of Heaven." They're freezing for lack of fuel, starving for food, dying because there isn't any medicine to fight disease. For five years they've been our fighting allies, and the Japs haven't licked them yet. Would you help them to keep on fighting . . . on our side? Would you? You would!

On and on it goes . . . the world around. And that is why this new, simple, streamlined, efficient way to help has been created. Our community's war fund in which The National War Fund participates. Your personal "magic carpet" is a check that whisks your dollars and your mercy everywhere they are needed. And . . . you give once . . . and for all! In one stroke of your pen you help to keep our fighting allies fighting, you help to provide for local needs right here at home, you help to keep up the morale of our fighting forces throughout the world through the USO. Seventeen War Agencies and our own local agencies are banded together to do these complex, global jobs. Look over the list. Figure out what you'd give each agency. Add it up . . . and double it! It isn't for "charity" . . . it's for VICTORY!

Wake Up, Washington!

A pertinent warning to Washingtonians comes from Capitol Hill. If the community does not rise up and make its influence felt for better government in the District now that various Senators and Representatives have taken the lead in introducing suffrage bills, the whole issue is likely to be dropped for at least a decade. We do not believe that this is idle talk. People who have not the energy or the interest in their own community welfare to demand a government of their own, and to work unceasingly for it, can scarcely expect Congress to worry over their plight when one emergency after another comes along.

Senators McCarran, Holman, Burton and others have manifested a deep interest in the District problem. So have Representatives Summers, Walter and Randolph and many others on the House side. These men are now beckoning to this voteless community to lay its case before Congress. They have even taken the initiative in working out plans to end our disfranchisement. What is the community going to do about it? Some concerted effort is obviously desirable. It is not to be supposed that all groups in the community are willing to accept the McCarran bill, for example, in its present form. But the least that can be expected is concerted action toward working out amendments that will make the bill acceptable to the great majority. We suggest that the community wake up and organize itself, to take advantage of the great opportunity that District leaders on the Hill are holding out to us.

No-Strike Pledge

Two of the Nation's most important industries are now threatened with general strikes. Chieftains of the "Big Five" railroad operating unions have ordered the taking of a strike vote among their 350,000 members. Coal miners in Alabama have refused to return to their jobs even in response to an appeal from John L. Lewis; and Mr. Lewis, as a matter of fact, has not yet renounced his threat to call a strike throughout the coal-mining industry if his wage demands are not met before the end of this month. What has become of the wartime no-strike pledge? Until now it has been faithfully upheld by an overwhelming majority of the country's organized workers. But the tendency at present appears to be to honor it more in the breach than in the observance.

One wonders what goes on inside the mind of an Alabama coal miner who refuses to help in the production of an essential article of war at a time when his own neighbors and kinsmen are risking their lives in battle. It is certain that he is neither unpatriotic nor indifferent to the outcome of the war. The issues at stake have simply become terribly confused to him. They have been confused, in some respects deliberately, by his own union leaders who have told him that he is striking against a private employer making huge profits while he struggles to meet increased living costs and that the Government has been rigged against him. The issues have been confused also by the sometimes dilatory and generally inconsistent handling of the problem by a variety of Government agencies. And they have been additionally confused by a labor law which takes so little account of the no-strike pledge as to formalize a procedure for going on strike.

These factors exert an influence only slightly less confusing to the mind of the average railroad worker. He, too, is now told by some of his leaders that his rights and interests are being ignored. No doubt the strike-vote motion of the railroad brotherhoods is largely ritualistic, an indispensable phase of the ceremonies attendant upon collective bargaining. But the very intimation of an intention to strike in an industry so vital to the Nation is unhealthy in time of war.

The basic trouble is that workers still nurture the notion that this war can be waged comfortably. Neither their union leaders nor their Government leaders have made them see that the winning of the war inevitably entails restricted living standards, that it exacts even the deferment of legitimate aspirations. In an ideal society the burden would be distributed proportionately with precise equity upon all. But since we have not yet achieved the ideal, sacrifices must sometimes be borne disproportionately—just as they are borne disproportionately by men in battle.

The primary obligation of every worker is to keep at his job—without interruption for any cause. We need a national dedication to this duty, a national reaffirmation of the no-strike pledge. This is unlikely to be brought about by adjustment boards or wage formulas—although these are needed to spread the strains of war as evenly and equitably as possible. It can be brought about only through tough, resolute and forthright leadership from the President, supported by the leaders of labor. We need to go back to first principles—to the principle that the United States, in a crisis, is entitled to the fullest devotion from every American, that individual and group interests, however valid, must be subordinated to the national welfare. Any violation of this principle is a form of betrayal.

Eyes On The Senate

The Senate has an opportunity this week to make its voice heard around the world. What is more, it can make its voice ring down through the corridors of history, for the Senate is undertaking to tell mankind what will be the attitude of the United States toward the maintenance of peace when this greatest of all wars has been victoriously concluded. Senators who rise from their seats to discuss this issue may well be staggered by the responsibility that is theirs. Their words and votes will in large measure shape the fate of the Nation "involving, as it does, the lives, welfare and happiness of millions of citizens."

So it is of the utmost importance that the issue before the Senate be clearly understood and that the debate be directed to only those questions that are meaningful at this time. In our opinion the issue before the Senate is not isolationism. That issue was decided with repeal of the Neutrality Act and passage of the Lend-Lease Act. It expired as an active issue with the declaration of war and the creation of the United Nations to put down aggression throughout the world. Public sentiment now clearly demands that this Nation take its part in the world community after the war as a powerful factor for law, order and peace. The Senate debate comes much too late to decide the issue of isolationism.

What is before the Senate is the question of this country's leadership in the establishment of a new world agency to implement the will of the United Nations after the war is over. Having already undertaken a world role of the greatest importance, we must now sincerely and forthrightly face the queries of our allies as to what we are willing to do to make our cooperation effective in the future. If the Senate evades that issue and gives the world only a weak gesture of good will, its resolution will amount to little more than a declaration of intention not to commit suicide.

Herein lies the grave weakness of the Connally resolution. It scarcely goes beyond the repudiation of isolationism. Or if it is intended to go further than that, its advocacy of an agreement between "free and sovereign nations" to establish and maintain "international authority, with power to prevent aggression and to preserve the peace of the world" is so vague as to be negative in effect. Instead of putting the United States in a position of leadership in mobilizing international power behind law and order, it would timidly offer to dip a toe into the international pool, providing the water should get neither too hot nor too cold.

Fortunately, the Senate will have before it a reasonable alternative to the innocuous Connally resolution. The compromise amendment to be introduced by Senator Pepper specifically proposes that we use our influence to make the United Nations the nucleus of "an international organization to promote cooperation among nations, with authority to settle international disputes peacefully, and with power, including military force, to suppress military aggression and to preserve the peace of the world." The advantages of this more specific and forthright language can scarcely be overemphasized. It proposes to build upon a foundation already in existence—the United Nations. It looks toward the creation of an "international organization" instead of an amorphous "authority" which might turn out to be only a new balance of power. It contemplates machinery for the settlement of international disputes and not merely the utilization of force by a concert of powers after war has become inevitable. Certainly that provision is vital; peace without routine means of adjusting differences and eliminating injustices could not possibly endure.

Use of military force by any international agency to keep the peace is a basic essential. That does not, however, imply an international army big enough to subdue the armed forces of any nation. The international organization would be dependent upon its constituent powers for the men, ships, planes and tanks that might be necessary to put down aggression. We must rely upon the will of the nations to work together for peace. But unless that collective will can be centralized in a definite working organization capable of assigning to each nation its obligation in meeting an aggressive threat, the hope of avoiding another great war a generation hence will be very meager.

Senate leadership will emerge as a vital factor in the future course of the world only if it is willing to meet this issue. It cannot, of course, make a blueprint for the postwar world at this time. But it can go a long way toward putting the United States in a position for effective leadership in the making of such a blueprint. If the Senate fails in this, it will have fumbled one of the greatest opportunities any legislative body has had in modern times to use its influence for law, order and peace in the world.

Exclusion Repeal

There should now be clear, swift sailing for the bill to repeal the obsolete and objectionable Chinese exclusion law. The House has given the proposal its blessing. The Senate, it is to be hoped, will take it under consideration without delay or obstruction and send it along to the White House with an overwhelming indorsement. This measure is intended as a gesture of friendship and good will toward our Chinese allies. If the gesture is to be made, it should not be made grudgingly. Its effectiveness would be greatly augmented if the Senators were to give it their unanimous support.

The measure passed by the House is a very simple one. It would put Chinese on a basis of parity with other nationalities. It would apply to them, in other words, the same quota system which governs immigration from European countries and would permit immigrants of Chinese origin to become naturalized, in time and in conformity with our laws, as citizens of the United States. The quota would operate in such a way as to permit only about 105 Chinese to enter this country in the course of a year. So it amounts, in fact, to little more than a gesture. But it is a gesture of great meaning to China—a land where gestures are appreciated and accorded much weight. To the Chinese, it means a recognition of their equality—a recognition always due them but made more urgent by the long years of their heroic struggle against aggression. To us, it should mean something even more important. It should mean a step toward the erasure forever of racial discrimination from our laws. That will be a significant conquest in the war we are waging for a freer and happier world.

Puppets In Manila

President Roosevelt's vigorous castigation of the puppet Philippine government set up by the Japanese will probably bring cheer to the hearts of millions of Filipinos. Most of them realize that the so-called republic based on a military alliance with Japan is a fraud and a delusion. They know that the puppet government in Manila can last only until General MacArthur returns to the Philippines to drive the last Jap invader into the sea. Still it is reassuring for them to have once more the promise of President Roosevelt that their liberties will be restored and that the government established by the Filipino people themselves will be preserved.

Mr. Roosevelt's wholehearted reference to the commonwealth government was especially significant because of the pressure that is being brought to bear upon him by President Quezon to upset the Philippine constitution. Mr. Quezon's term expires next month. Under the basic law of the commonwealth he must step down in favor of Vice President Osmena. To avoid that legal necessity Mr. Quezon is understood to be arguing that the war has already destroyed the commonwealth constitution and that consequently he should remain in office, presumably until a new Philippine government can be set up. But that undemocratic idea appears to have met with a cool reception at the White House.

Not only does the President's statement reaffirm the United States' recognition of the commonwealth government of which Vice President Osmena will become head on November 15; it also recalls that the "principal executive officers of the commonwealth were transferred in 1942 from Corregidor to Washington" at the President's request. No doubt he intended in that language to recognize the presence here of Mr. Quezon's successor as well as Mr. Quezon himself. Nor is it reasonable to suppose that the President would welcome a puppet Philippine regime in Washington after so emphatically denouncing the puppet regime in Manila.

The best hope of stability and rapid progress toward independence for the Philippines is the preservation of the commonwealth government created by the Filipinos themselves under the authority of an act of Congress. Mr. Quezon must see that even if he should succeed in breaking down the commonwealth constitution to remain in office, his illegitimate regime would have to compete with other puppet governments for authority in the islands after the war is over. He cannot reasonably expect the American Government to lend its influence to any scheme that would be productive of so much chaos.

THE MEN IN WHITE

Naval Hospital

The men in white seem uniform enough
So many moving-badges in space
And any force imperious like White
Removes identity from the acquired face.

Even the fluid words are dammed
Into a pond of the accepted phrase,
Yet the cubed water ripples,
Sharp is its temper in the lightning days.

And old man Human in his boyish guise
Blings ears and kowtows to a bristling chief—Fouls up the works or swabs a deck
And whittles gismos for his son's relief.

With Yankee wiliness or Southern wit,
Starboard or port, he shades the current theme,
Fusing the eager blood and brain
To ride triumphantly on the beam.

Willkie's Chances

By Mark Sullivan

Out In Front

THIS COLUMN reported last week that, as of the present time, Mr. Wendell L. Willkie is farther toward getting the Republican presidential nomination than any other aspirant or possibility. The condition continues the same, only more so. Chief reason is Mr. Willkie's extraordinary vigor and activity. Within six days ending last week, Mr. Willkie galloped through a series of activities almost as whirl-wind-like as the closing days of a hotly contested presidential campaign:

October 15—Delivered a major political address in St. Louis, broadcast over a Nation-wide hookup; and spent two days conferring with Republican leaders.

October 18—After traveling 1000 miles to New York, delivered a Nation-wide radio address (nonpolitical), in behalf of the National War Fund.

October 19—Traveled 225 miles to Washington to talk for some hours in a closed session to Republican members of Congress.

October 20—Back in New York, gave an important and deliberately phrased interview in which he warned members of the British government not to name him as a candidate for the American presidency, directly or indirectly—whether by private statements that retention of the Roosevelt Administration in power is desirable on account of the war; or "making remarks" which reflect upon American political leaders opposed to the Roosevelt Administration.

October 21—Traveled some 300 miles to Syracuse, N. Y., to make a speech in behalf of the Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor.

THESE were public activities of Mr. Willkie. At each stop and in between he carried on intensive contacts with Republican leaders. These are continuation of a drive which Mr. Willkie has carried on for several weeks. He has gone into New England and spent some days conferring with Republican leaders in New Hampshire, the first State to hold presidential primaries next spring. He has gone into the Southern States, and by conferences with Republicans there brought about a condition which, as his friends believe, will result in changed leadership favorable to Mr. Willkie. He has spent some weeks in the Middle West. He spent five days in southern California, in a series of conferences and activities which made upon observers there, as elsewhere, an impression of furiously driving energy.

Mr. Willkie's travels and activities have brought him an acquaintance with local Republican leaders such that, as reported by Mr. Turner Catledge in the New York Times: "He contends even now that he knows more of the down-to-the-precinct Republican workers than any other man in the party, and that when convention time rolls around he will know twice as many as anyone else."

MR. WILLKIE makes a genuine impression upon those with whom he confers, and upon newsmen. It is reflected over and over in print, and even more in private conversation. The impression is one of drive and determination, and confidence. In his talk with Republican members of Congress in Washington, his manner and spirit was described by Mr. John O'Donnell of the Washington Times-Herald as something that politicians "had never experienced before." In his contacts with Republican leaders, Mr. Willkie does not plead or cajole; he tells 'em. What he tells them is suggested by Reporter Edward Foillard of the Washington Post: "His friends appear to be supremely confident of his chances; in fact, they believe—or at least say—that he is a 2-to-1 shot for the nomination."

Nothing comparable to Mr. Willkie's activity is being done by any other Republican presidential aspirant, or possibility. Previously this column, reporting current politics, said that the activity by and in behalf of Mr. Willkie is four-fifths of the total amount of activity by or in behalf of all the other Republican presidential aspirants or possibilities. So far as politics can be expressed in mathematical terms, the figure four-fifths probably ought to be changed to nineteen-twentieths.

The assertion, previously made in this column and by some disputed—that Mr. Willkie is farther toward the nomination than anyone else—is justified by current facts, as of a time some 7½ months in advance of the nominating convention.

Income Tax

No one has yet answered the one damning argument against the sales tax: Its burden is greatest on those who have the lowest income.

The mother of a child whose father is in the army receives $80 a month on which to live. The father's wife or the alderman's wife has his salary of several thousand a year on which to live. Yet each mother pays a 10 per cent tax on bottles, diapers, buggies, toys and perhaps even food for her baby. Is this fair?

Hide it under all the figures you have, and this is still the one unanswerable argument against this kind of a tax.

The income tax is the only completely fair tax.

War And The Soldier

By Paul Schubert

Offense And Defense

SELDOM in the history of warfare has there been such a variety of action going on at one time. The present war is so big—fought in so many theaters and by such dissimilar combatants, that the news of any given day serves to illustrate virtually any military situation we choose to look for.

Some of the parties to the war are fresh, some are fagged out. Some are strong, some are weak. Some are magnificently equipped, some have almost no equipment at all.

In some theaters the action is mass action, fought by armies of millions. In other theaters, small groups of specialists wage minor campaigns of importance chiefly to the warfare of next year or the year after that.

The common denominator of this broad picture is man—the individual soldier.

Battles are fought and won by men—men welded into organized units by training and discipline, but men whose capacity to win depends in the ultimate on their willingness to perform regardless of the danger of pain, maiming or death.

THE WARFARE against Germany in the European theater sees the men of the various armies fighting three distinct kinds of battles. 1. The offensive. 2. The calculated defensive. 3. The involuntary defensive.

Both the Russians and the allied British-American forces are on the offensive.

Offensive warfare is hard, since the army waging it deliberately invites trouble—goes looking for battle, tries to take ground that the enemy doesn't want to give up.

Offensive warfare takes tough soldiers, men who don't shrink from the difficult and dangerous. On the other hand, since offensive warfare is an act of volition, it is possible to call on volunteers—that is, on the pick of the troops—for many of the worst jobs.

Volunteers approach these tasks in a state of mind altogether different from that of cross-section troops arbitrarily assigned the same work. And offensive warfare is exciting—and comparatively rewarding. The victorious army sees the tangible reward of its victory, a city or an area captured, prisoners taken, booty stacked up by the roadside, the enemy defeated.

The British and American allies are waging a success story in Italy. The Russians are not only succeeding, but they are driving the hated enemy back from their own soil. Suppose our troops in Italy were forcing the Germans out of the White Mountains instead of the Apennines—how personally they, and we, would rejoice over every yard of ground captured, over every German invader slain.

IN THIS year's battles the Germans are on the defensive.

But the defensive warfare of the Italian front is fighting of a very different kind than the defensive warfare of the Russian front.

On the Italian front the Germans are fighting a calculated defensive. They are giving up ground deliberately; it is their object to make us pay a maximum price for this ground, in time, in material, in men. They are making the Italians, too, pay a price. They are scorning the earth of Italy. They are destroying and looting as they fall back. They are mining the roads, shelling the river crossings, defending the heights, setting up ambushes and booby traps.

What they are not doing is calling on their men to die in last-ditch defenses of the ground. On the contrary, they are trying to keep their casualty lists down to a minimum.

Defensive of this sort, if effectively carried out by competent troops, may be almost as stimulating to morale as successful offensive action. If our armies are 70 or 80 miles from Rome, a distance that could be covered in a couple of days of unopposed advance, and if the Germans require us to use a month to fight our way forward to Rome, they may believe themselves successful even though we do ultimately gain our objective.

But on the Russian front, the Germans face an altogether different problem.

There, after trying to fight a calculated defensive in large-scale retreat, they suddenly find themselves in mortal peril, threatened with break-through that may lead to major defeat. In such a case there are only two alternatives: (1) fight, or (2) stand and fight it out to the death.

Such a fight calls on everything every soldier has. It is the ultimate showdown. It is not decided by the best troops, but by the weakest. In such a fight to be on the defensive tries morale to the core. If morale cracks, the result is panic and disaster. The present Russian front battle is perhaps the greatest trial the German army has ever faced, and may be decisive in its effect on the remainder of the war.

Political Ambitions

On March 14, 1943, this column printed a letter of mine in which I begged that elections be postponed until the life struggle in which we are now engaged has been brought to a victorious conclusion. But the year 1944 approaches and the United States shows itself unable to comprehend the really vital issue at stake by plunging headlong into petty political strife. The supreme example is this recent senatorial spectacle. A handful of Senators take it upon themselves to journey about the world and return to this country armed with half-truths and criticisms acquired from any and all available sources. That this irresponsible group should be permitted to beleaguer the President to such an extent that he feels it necessary to divert valuable time from the winning of the war to the refutation of such absurd charges, reduces our Government and what it represents to a complete travesty.

If these gentlemen could lay aside even temporarily their political ambitions, they would instead offer their services to the President in whatever capacity they could be used for the purpose of bringing to the speediest possible end this world-wide slaughter.

Father Draft

No wonder foreigners think American women are soft! What a disgraceful spectacle we make, wringing our hands and wailing, for fear the Nation's fathers may have to go to war. In England, Russia, and other belligerent nations, scarcely an able-bodied man is left in civilian life. The courageous women of our Allies have taken the blow in their stride, putting their countries' welfare far above their personal convenience or even comfort.

We should do well to cease this fruitless debating and delaying effort to avoid the inevitable draft of the fathers. How much better it would be to spend all this time and energy in devising solutions to the problems this draft will undoubtedly create, and start the machinery moving at once.

We must face the fact that the average American mother will have to go to work to supplement her drafted husband's income. What provisions are being made for the care of her helpless children?

We should initiate a thorough study of successful child-care projects in England and Russia and begin at once to organize similar projects here on a nation-wide scale.

"Degree-Worship"

The Post is right in saying that Representative Ramspeck made a point in complaining about the "excessive veneration" by Civil Service personnel officers for college degrees. Anyone who has tried to help applicants knows how this degree-worship keeps out the fit while admitting men with degrees from inferior colleges.

Although organized medicine has practically stamped out the old-time quack-factory, the country has hundreds of so-called universities whose bachelors of arts could not get freshman standing in our best institutions. These graduates not only lack any background of general knowledge, for they don't read books and cannot write or speak English as an educated person might be expected to, but they reveal by their loose thinking that they do not even have trained minds. The Civil Service accepts a degree from some seat of ignorance or teacher-mill at its face value and demands a degree for certain classifications, which are denied to those who learned their craft through experience and native intelligence.

Degree-worship, however, is not confined to the Civil Service. It pervades the unofficial agencies that have their headquarters in Washington. Let a person with practical experience try to compete with a college-trained social worker in a job in which social work experience is a minor qualification and see what happens.

Mr. Ramspeck's just attack on the impractical methods of the Civil Service forces a mere private citizen to ask why Congress does not apply tests of knowledge and fitness in filling committee positions. All it now requires is seniority or ability to get reelected. Thus back-slappers and baby-kissers are put into committee jobs and chairmanships where the best brains and ripest experience of the country ought to be.

Sales Tax

A sales tax in one form or another may be an effective means of preventing inflation. Though its regressive character can be softened by the grant of substantial exemptions, Congress has evinced no inclination to adopt them. Sales tax advocates have failed to show that it is the only or the best way to check the price spiral. The Treasury plan seems equally able to do this. Discussion has not advanced far enough to indicate what merits or defects any congressional plan may have.

The Other Cheek

"WHAT MEN LIVE BY: RUSSIAN STORIES AND LEGENDS," by Leo Tolstoy. Translation by Louise and Aylmer Maude; introduction by Dorothy Canfield Fisher. (Pantheon Books, $2.50).

The Tolstoy of these eight tales, which might more properly have been called parables or religious allegories, is not exactly the Tolstoy of War and Peace or Anna Karenina. Here we encounter the mystical Tolstoy, but who is not any less an artist for that. This is the Tolstoy who has experienced the despair, the profound spiritual crisis and the conversion described in his famous Confession. Some of these stories, or maybe all, are based on real Russian folk-legends, but Tolstoy altered or adapted them to serve as vehicles for his own religious doctrine. They are so simply and exquisitely written that not even a child can miss the point of them.

The Tolstoyan solution could be described as a kind of ethical quietism. Tolstoy had reduced religion to two principles, both borrowed literally from the Gospels. First there is the necessity of love as the one great solvent in society. Second there is the futility, and indeed wickedness, of resisting evil. The interesting thing to observe about the Tolstoyan social principles is how they stand at opposite extremes to principles of action most evident in the world today, just as Tolstoy's notion of a Christian anarchism offers the perfect antithesis of the Moloch State.

Thus the Tolstoyan attitude toward this or any other war could scarcely be anything but pacifism. In one of these parables, called "The Godson," the central character, in disobedience to what appears to be a divine command, prevents the robbery of his father, warns a woman of her husband's infidelity and kills a man who was seeking to kill his mother. He is immediately shown that by these actions, so far from reducing the total of evil in the world, he has grievously multiplied it. He must then be taught, by a long penitential process, the only means by which evil can be cured. In a series of symbolic lessons he learns the impossibility of attempting to cleanse other hearts until he has cleansed his own. He learns the necessity of overcoming the fear of death and of the utter forgetfulness of himself and his destiny in pity for others, including his enemies.

In another parable, which forms the title piece, an archangel is punished for a sin by being made to assume the body of a man for as long as it may take him to learn the meaning of human life. He learns why it is that a man need have no concern about his personal needs. It is because "it is not given to a man to know his own needs. . . . God does not wish men to live apart and therefore does not reveal to them what each one needs for himself; but he wishes them to live united and therefore reveals to each of them what is necessary for all." Here, then, is the superbly simple and superbly heroic Tolstoyan formula for the salvation of society. It is interesting to observe how Tolstoy's mystical revelation leads him—as indeed mysticism almost invariably leads to—into pantheism. Since God and goodness are one and become immanent in us by love, it follows that God is impersonal. Similarly, we by love, become one with God and are thus depersonalized. Thus the question of personal immortality becomes unimportant, one of those matters about which "a man need have no care."

Tolstoy's anarchism arises partly from his belief (again characteristic of mystics generally) that property is an impediment to love but more particularly from his doctrine of nonresistance. Coercion of law is wicked, even the coercion of law is wicked, even if it is for men learn to love what need is there of law? The only answer to it is that rarely, if ever, has there been a time or place where more than a few men have been capable of the degree of love that Tolstoy asks of all. But even this leaves us between the horns of what is probably the most difficult of all moral dilemmas. Do we not in the process of resisting evil all too often (as in war) do great evil ourselves? Do not the very means of violence that we employ to combat evil often become ends in themselves? But again, is not the refusal to resist evil simply to make a present of the world to the wicked?

"We must," says William James, discussing this dilemma in Varieties of Religious Experience, "frankly confess that in the end that actually is, the virtue of sympathy, charity and nonresistance may be, and often have been, manifested in excess. The progress of darkness have systematically taken advantage of them. The whole history of constitution of government is a commentary on the excellence of resisting evil, and when one cheek is smitten of smiling back."

But this, as James himself perceives, is only half of it. "The saint may waste his tenderness and be the dupe and victim of his charitable fervor, but the general function of his charity in social evolution is essential. If things are ever to move upward, someone must take the first step and assume the risk of it. No one who is not willing to try charity, to try nonresistance, as the saint is always willing, can tell whether these methods will or will not succeed. When they do succeed they are far more powerfully successful than force or worldly prudence."

Policing The World

By Ernest Lindley

Division Of Responsibility

AT LEAST PART of the disagreement and confusion which already has appeared in discussion of means of enforcing the peace is due to the failure to break the job down into its constituent parts. Senator Ball and some of the other backers of the B2H2 resolution have been advocating a police force separate from the armed forces of the individual nations. Obviously, if such a force were to keep the world peace, it would have to be stronger than the armed forces of any individual nation, possibly stronger than those of several nations combined. It would require bases, and it would have to depend for its supplies and equipments on one or more of the great industrial powers. It would have to control the sea lanes.

An international police force strong enough to preserve world peace but separate from the forces of the great armed powers is clearly impractical, even if it were desirable. But Senator Ball does not advocate a force of these dimensions. He favors rather a small force, and grants that the United States and other great powers would and should retain much larger forces under their direct separate controls, at least for a long time to come.

Such a small force could be used, therefore, only for limited and specific purposes, such as the occupation and policing of Germany or Japan after their defeat. Britain, the United States, Russia—and smaller nations—could assign forces to police Germany under a central United Nations command. This would require no more than the continuation of the system of command under which the British and ourselves fought in Tunisia and Sicily and are fighting in the Southwest Pacific. Whether such a small police force assigned to a specific task flew a United Nations pennant or wore a special United Nations insignia would be merely incidental. It could exist, however, only with the support of all the neighboring great powers, or the support of some and tolerance of others.

ALTHOUGH other United Nations may contribute, the enforcement of peace will depend upon agreement among the great armed powers. Of these, Russia and China are land powers. Russia has a small navy and China none. The policing of a large part of the world will, therefore, fall naturally, in the first instance, on the two great sea powers: Britain and the United States. That is the natural and substantial origin of the proposal that, pending the creation of a better or more complete system of world security, Britain and the United States should carry forward after the war their present naval arrangements.

Under these, the United States Navy holds the primary responsibility for the entire Pacific and for the western Atlantic, while the British navy takes the responsibility for the eastern Atlantic and the Mediterranean Sea and Indian Ocean, from Gibraltar to Singapore. This does not prohibit the mingling of naval forces. We have fighting ships in the Mediterranean and a squadron attached to the British home fleet. We escort convoys to Africa. A British aircraft carrier recently practiced with an American task force in the Pacific. Likewise, certain British and American bases are shared.

SUCH AN ARRANGEMENT could be carried forward after the war by military agreement between the President and the appropriate British authorities and operated under the active direction of the combined chiefs of staff. With the attendant air power, it is a ready-made instrument for policing the sea lanes.

This does not mean, in any sense, an exclusive Anglo-American working combination. It takes a great deal of wealth to maintain a great navy, and with Japan and Germany out of the way, no nation is likely to try to challenge Britain or the United States on the seas for a long time to come. What Russia's aspirations in this direction may prove to be, no one can say.

Russian policing of the Baltic and of her own Pacific shores would fit readily into the American-British policing system. Naval forces cannot police Germany, either internally or externally. Assuming that the United States will not desire to keep armed forces on the European continent for more than a short period after the war—even if a long occupation of Germany should be deemed essential—this job will have to be undertaken by Germany's close neighbors. There will be other special tasks for which special policing arrangements will be necessary.

But outside the continent of Eurasia, the backbone of a world police force obviously must be the British and American navies, with their attendant air forces. There are no other materials with which to make such a police force, even though, as the peace is organized, the forces of other United Nations may be joined with them and what is now simply a working military arrangement may be elaborated into a formal system of enforcing the peace.

Tax Framers Weigh Higher Profits Levy

By Francis M. Le May
Associated Press Staff Writer

An increase in the excess profits tax to 95 per cent, from the present 90 per cent level, is deemed likely by some qualified authorities.

Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota, minority leader on the tax-initiating House Ways and Means Committee, told this correspondent he believed such action might be taken "on the basis of present information," and the corporation normal and surtax rates "will be left where they are."

However, he added that additional information might change the trend toward a higher excess profits rate.

Profits Investigated

Other members disclosed that the committee, in its closed-door sessions, was sifting reports of huge incomes by corporations not engaged in war work and whose profits have been swollen by the wartime spending.

Internal revenue officials were invited before the committee today to discuss this subject, and there were some indications the revenue statute might be revised to impose larger taxes on these corporations.

This could be done, one committee member said, by putting greater emphasis on invested capital than on average earnings records, as the base in computing excess profits. Earnings of hotels came in for a large part of Saturday's committee discussion of profits.

Purely Wartime Measure

The excess profits tax is regarded in Congress as purely a wartime measure, to be repealed upon termination of hostilities.

The Ways and Means Committee already has scrapped the Treasury's proposal to raise $6,500,000,000 additional by upping individual income rates.

Likewise, there appear to be little, if any, likelihood that the committee will approve increases in corporation normal and surtax income rates. This would blast the Administration's request for $1,100,000,000 more revenue by raising the corporation rate from 40 per cent to 50 per cent.

Thus, the outlook for any material revenue additions in the new general tax bill has virtually vanished, unless a Federal retail sales tax or some other new method of taxation is used. The Administration recommended that an additional $10,500,000,000 be raised.

Naples War Damage Exceeds Expectation, Morgenthau Says

By the Associated Press

Allied Headquarters, Algiers, Oct. 24.—The destruction wrought by the Germans at Naples exceeded anything he had expected, Treasury Secretary Henry Morgenthau said today after a swing through war sectors which took him to Tunisia, Sicily, Naples and the Fifth Army front.

"In Naples harbor the Germans not only sank vessels, but they chained them to other vessels to make the raising of them more difficult," he said.

Regarding the recent recommendation of U. S. Senators who visited this theater that American soldiers be given home leave after a period of service abroad, Morgenthau said the soldiers he had met did not want to go home until the Germans are beaten.

He said he felt Army special service officers had done a good job of selling war bonds to soldiers in this theater of operations "in some cases," but he planned to send a "topflight man" into the area to take over the job.

Morgenthau pointed out 86 per cent of the total American Army payroll in this area returns to the United States in the form of allotments, money orders, bond purchases or purchases at post exchanges. This leaves only 14 per cent which the soldiers spend locally.

The secretary said that so far as he knew the present official exchange rate of the French franc and the Italian lira would remain unchanged. The franc is pegged at 2 cents and the lira at 1 cent.

Morgenthau said that under reverse lease lend the Army no longer pays cash for anything bought locally in North Africa but that all such purchases are put on the lease-lend books against American supplies given to the French.

Morgenthau has conferred with virtually all high American and British army leaders, the French General Henri Giraud and Charles de Gaulle as well as other members of the French Committee of National Liberation, and Alexander Bogomolov, Russian delegate to the French committee.

Draft Delinquents Face Penalty After Nov. 1

Draft delinquents were warned by the Department of Justice last night that they have only one week left in which to liquidate their delinquencies before new penalties become effective November 1, and the warning was backed up by an announcement that in the past week the Federal Bureau of Investigation has arrested 736 registrants who had failed to observe all the Selective Service regulations and orders.

Selective Service on October 15 announced the new penalties for those who have failed to keep their local boards posted on changes in address or have otherwise failed to comply with instructions, the penalty for those between 18 and 37 to be immediate reclassification into 1-A regardless of order numbers or occupational or dependency status.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said yesterday that in addition to the 736 delinquent registrants taken into custody by the FBI in the past week, 1181 others have been located by the FBI and local law enforcement officers and their delinquencies corrected. Courts throughout the Nation during the week have returned Federal indictments against 141 delinquents, and there have been 130 persons convicted in Federal Court during this time, resulting in sentences of more than 394 years. On one day alone in the northern district of California 353 Federal complaints were filed with United States commissioners charging various draft delinquencies.

"Time and time again men who believed they were successfully evading their patriotic duty to the United States have been located and apprehended by the FBI," Hoover said. "We have had cases where registrants attempted to send substitutes into service; changed their names and moved to strange localities; became hermits, attempted bribery, or gave false information. They are now in prison, and we are close behind others."

"Every registrant should be positive of his good standing with his board. If he is at all uncertain, he should check with his board without fail this week."

"As of October 1, a total of 6036

persons had been convicted of Selective Service violations. Sentences imposed totaled 14,102 years, and fines $872,820. In more than 250,000 cases investigated by the FBI, the registrants have either been made available to the armed services or were found to have complied with the act.

The Justice Department's warning said those delinquents who are reclassified as 1-A and ordered to report for induction but who fail to report will be cited for prosecutive action.

"Delinquents between 38 and 43 will be classified 1-A but will not be ordered to report for induction unless the armed forces agree to accept them," its statement said. Violation of the Selective Service Act involves a possible sentence of five years in prison and a fine of $5000.

The story of the man throughout whose life the idea of PEACE runs like a flame!

JOSEPH E. DAVIES,
former U.S. Ambassador to the U.S.S.R.

says: This book gives the unfamiliar account of what, in fact, is an exciting and romantic life. Here appear those forces through the years which combined to temper, refine, and strengthen those qualities of courage, high-mindedness, shrewdness, together with the blunt moral integrity and practical idealism which characterizes Litvinoff. It is a fascinating reading.

An interesting feature of the book is the authoritative manner in which the history of Russia in the last 35 years is unfolded. For in this story of Litvinoff's life there is reflected the story of Russia. I know of no available book which would present to the American public anything like it.

It is a good job, well done, and a valuable contribution to an understanding of the Soviet attitude as to the present, as well as to the future. It is indispensable reading for any one who wishes to understand this new phenomenon in historical evolution—the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Removing Appliance Cords as soon as Foods are Cooked—can help to Build Bombers faster

YOU have an important obligation toward helping to end the war sooner! Your Government urges you to voluntarily conserve electricity. You can do this by removing appliance cords from outlets just as soon as your toast is ready... your waffles are baked... or your coffee is "perked". You can do your part by not wasting one bit of electricity whenever and wherever you use it in your home... your store... or your shop. Every time you conserve electricity, you make more coal, more manpower, more transportation facilities and more critical materials available for our fighting men who are giving the Axis the whipping of their lives.

LYING on his bed, with four pillows placed under his head and knees and arms, the man above is feeling more completely relaxed than he has felt in years. His jaw, his lips and his eyes are also playing their part in the exercise he is doing. As you can see, however, he really is not "exercising" in the usual sense of the word. Quite the contrary. And soon this man, who has been suffering from sleeplessness and jittery aching muscles, will enjoy one of the most restful nights of sleep he has ever known.

The picture above is an illustration of one of the easy ways to relax that is described in a new book, Release From Nervous Tension, by David H. Fink, a practicing neuropsychiatrist. It is just one of the many methods, both physical and mental, by which Dr. Fink can help you relieve overwrought nerves, and alleviate the many bodily ailments (such as indigestion, stomach ulcers, high blood pressure, arthritis, allergies) which a case of war nerves or any other kind of nerves may be giving you.

Your Trouble Is NOT "Just Imagination"

Contrary to the advice you may be getting from well-meaning but misinformed friends, these nervous disorders are not the result of your imagination. Nerves control all our organs, and emotional tensions can strain your muscles to produce such symptoms as backache, or pains along the ribs, or between the shoulders. They can cause just as painful and just as serious an ailment as you could get from a germ or an organic defect. If anything, your nervous ailment is even worse. For many other ailments may cure themselves—but the nervous sufferer makes his trouble worse by worrying about it, and although he realizes this, he can't stop worrying.

SEND NO MONEY—Just Use Coupon

Release From Nervous Tension is very definitely a self-help book. Its instructions are designed to help you banish nervousness and emotional conflict, and release your personality for a happier and more productive life. How to Break the Vicious Circle

With clear and practical illustrations from actual case histories, Dr. Fink shows you where to start to break up this vicious circle of worry causing pain and distress, and the pain itself causing more worry. In friendly, untechnical style, he shows you a number of ways by which you can break the grip of nervous tension on your system.

Dr. Fink shows you how to relax both your body and your mind, and explains the A-B-C's of protecting yourself from people who drive you crazy. He suggests ideas for analyzing yourself, your marriage, and your job, to determine what is causing the strain on your nervous system. And he has devised a method for losing those friends who cause you worry and anxiety: friends you don't want around you any more, although you are afraid to tell them so.

"Gets Right Down to Brass Tacks"

The Book-of-the-Month Club News says: "Dr. Fink not only knows his stuff, he knows how to write . . . with humor, relaxed and easy. He gets right down to brass tacks and tells you, in detail, step by step, the simple mechanics of bodily relaxation. Then when those wretched knots are loosened, he gives you some simple, useful, concrete hints about how to play, how to work, how to look at yourself as if you were somebody else, how to understand what you see in yourself, and how to start over again after one of the ever-recurring mistakes we all make."

By practicing Dr. Fink's proved technique for releasing yourself from nervous tension you can very quickly know what it means to feel free from strain, really at ease mentally and physically, no longer "all wound up." As little as five minutes, morning and evening, devoted to these simple, restful exercises will show definitely how much systematic relaxation can do for you. And in as short a time as five days, this book will prove that it can accomplish the results you are after, or it costs you nothing.

What This Book Is Actually Doing for Others

Below is a short excerpt from a long letter written to the publishers by TAYLOR CALDWELL, best-selling author of Dynasty of Death. Miss Caldwell has kindly permitted us to quote from her letter praising Release From Nervous Tension.

"All of a sudden, four years ago, the joy went out of my writing. It was a frightful effort. I lost my memory in fits and starts, became quite ill (especially around the time I had to file my income tax reports), became a curse to my family with my irritability. Lately I came across your life-saver Release From Nervous Tension. I read and reread it; I've just finished it for the third time. Then I did considerable thinking. I am glad to say that I was able to sit down and write 20 pages at one clip on my new novel . . . and I greeted my suffering family so cheerily that they were mute with astonishment."

Following are other comments from among hundreds of letters in our files

"I was on the brink of a nervous breakdown when I learned of this book and sent for it. Just reading it through has helped me and I am going to pass it among my friends who need its wisdom."—L. I. B., Mich.

"A most unusual book. The author has hit the bull's-eye and it should have a wide circulation among persons concerned with management of personnel."—Maj. Gen. M., U.S.M.C.

"The book really is filled with explanations simple enough for a layman to understand, and with practical suggestions of ways to overcome nervousness. I bought the book because I was tired of being told casually to relax without being told how to accomplish that desirable end. Dr. Fink's method works."

—M. M., Penna.

"After being quite tense for years, I found this condition worse following an abdominal operation. This book seems like the answer to prayer."—Mrs. T. G., Cal.

"Exceeded my expectations. Just reading the book is a relaxation. It actually tells you what to do. Have bought a number of similar books, but this is the first one that clicked."

—A. B., Ohio

"Real relaxation and relief have resulted from a brief trial. A wonderful book!"

—M. M. S., New Jersey

"Your recent book has been suggested by me to many patients as a sort of prescription with much success."—Dr. L. G., Cal.

During Bitter Discussion of Social Drinking, Woman Is Charged With Being Narrow-Minded; She Feels Very Broad-Minded; Wants an Opinion

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I feel that I am a very fair and broad minded person; but I have been told recently that I am narrow minded on the subject of women's drinking. I had expressed my ideas on the proper use of liquor; or perhaps I should say, drinking was the subject that provoked a bitter discussion. Since I am a faithful reader of your column, and have always found your views to be intelligent and trustworthy, I should like to have your opinions on the following:

First, what is your opinion of a woman who would attend a ball game with her husband and drink liquor from the same bottle with him, during the game; and take so much that she finally "passed out" before the game was over? Her excuse was that it was so bitter cold in the stadium that she didn't realize how much she was drinking. My opinion is that such conduct cheapens a woman. Am I narrow minded there? Since that incident, the woman's husband has left her and gone off with some other woman.—of the lower class, I would say, because she is now living with him, although they aren't married.

Anyway, after the separation, which hurt the wife's pride more than her heart, she has been going out occasionally, but not often, with a man who takes her to establishments where drinks are served; and where people sit at tables and have three or four drinks and maybe a couple of dances before coming home. Now, she says all men are alike—in the sense of having immoral or dishonorable intentions toward women. I say she gets that impression of men by cheapening herself in their eyes first; by going such places and drinking with them. My idea of a proper evening's entertainment would be to go out to dinner, have a drink before the meal if you cared to; and later perhaps after a show, have another drink, or go to some nice place to dance.

I say it is cheapening yourself to go to these drinking establishments where you just sit and drink; or maybe go out on the floor to dance and return to your table to order more drinks,—especially if you are a person who claims to have ideals and want the better things in life. This woman has a child to whom she is very devoted. I say the child will bear the brunt if her mother is seen in these places; and in the company of disreputable women, as she sometimes is. But she says her child will never know about these things. Now, the argument is: I claim these things cannot be done, if you want the respect of nice people. And she says I am narrow-minded. What is your opinion?

M. B.

Gives Herself Away As Bigoted Busybody

DEAR M. B.: In order to provide the exact answer to your question, namely: Whether you are broad-minded (as you think), or narrow-minded (as your friend believes), I have been consulting Webster's, for a precise definition of these terms. And it appears that you are guilty of narrow-mindedness, as charged. To be broad-minded, says Webster's, is to be "tolerant of liberal views." To be narrow-minded is to be "not liberal; bigoted." And to be bigoted is to be "obstinately and intolerantly attached to one's own belief or opinion." And certainly you are obstinately attached to your derogatory opinion of persons who patronize "drinking establishments;" and "intolerant" of that aspect of life. To be "liberal" of mind is (says Webster's), "to be not bound by orthodox tenets; independent in opinion; not conservative." It is to have "freedom from prejudice;" and to exercise "magnanimity of judgment." And to be magnanimous is to be "great of mind; elevated above what is low, mean or ungenerous (in thought)."

Further research in Webster's turns up information which puts you on the spot as being a busybody in relation to your friend, in seeking to manage her behavior and in partly (i. e., with offensive and ill bred forwardness) passing narrow-minded judgment on her. A busybody, we learn, is "an officious or inquisitive person; a meddler." And on examining the word "meddler," we find that "to meddle is to concern oneself officiously or impertinently with another's affairs;" to intrude in things which are not one's concern and to volunteer advice or assistance that has not been asked for. So there you are, in the ungainly, unprofitable position of acting the part of bigoted meddler in your friend's affairs,—and feeling self-righteously indignant when she scolds you for it.

Her Friend's Conduct Is Another Story

For the simple reason that I am not discussing her case; but rather confining myself strictly to your legitimate concern, namely: whether you are a broad-minded or narrow-minded person. In the event she should self-justifyingly ask my opinion of the merit or demerit of her actions, as versus your excited strictures, I would then undertake to express what I believed to be the truth about her design-for-living.

Proper Care Saves Brushes

Get a lot of ruined paint brushes are haunting folks these days when good new brushes are hard to find. It is an old story—knowing you should have cleaned those brushes before putting them away; but forgetting, and then finding them later all dried out and no good. Use linseed oil or turpentine or other painting oil or a prepared brush-cleaning compound to clean brushes that have been used for ordinary paint. For shellac brushes, clean with alcohol, while lacquer brushes should be cleaned with lacquer thinner (if you can find it—it's scarce!).

Good news for home painters, however, is that synthetic paint brush bristles are working out very well—and that they may turn out to be stiff competition for natural hog bristles after the war. So far, the Army gets first choice of the synthetic bristle brushes, but eventually they'll be available for civilian use.

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

By Martha Ellyn

Simplicity of menu, simplicity of table setting is the wartime fashion with food. But simplicity does not mean unattractive service or unpalatable food.

Martha Ellyn

Elaborate table settings are out for most hostesses because very few homes now have maid service. It is fascinating to set a table with fine linen, sparkling glassware and fine china, if you have the time to help set your house in order after the banquet. But if you are doing your own laundry, polishing your own glassware and washing your own china, you will like the simple, effective way of entertaining.

Production of many table items have been cut, but you can still find practical items in the stores. Neither china nor glassware is made of strategic materials. However, the armed forces need large supplies of ordinary crockery and glass, and the factories busy on these orders get behind on the civilian order. But even though our American manufacturers of china, pottery and wooden accessories are hampered by labor shortage, yet they continue to make limited deliveries. This permits a limited amount coming to the shops, so shop with an idea of buying when you see some article which pleases you. If you go home and think it over, the very item may not be available when you go back to buy.

American pottery is beautiful and inexpensive. The patterns of service pottery are designed to go with the kinds of furnishings we like in our homes. You find that even the flora and fauna that decorate the pottery dinnerware are typically American. The colors are fresh and clear and there's a contemporary feeling about the way they have been blended to make up beautiful pieces.

Our American glassware too is still available in many attractive designs. The brilliance, fire and sparkle of glassware on a table does much to make any meal a success. Dinner tables set with jelly glasses won't be a help to sparkling conversation. But drink from a lovely glass goblet—be it long or short stemmed, and you will find its loveliness will be reflected in the mood and conversation of the diners. If you want to save your most handsome and precious table linens, you will find simple doily, mat and runner sets. These are made of mirrors, plastic, rayon

The Social Revolution

The social revolution? Yes. It is the word on every lip. Where'er we turn it is explained. By those who boast its championant.

First Revolutionist: "The common man is on the rise. At long last he will claim his own. The robber barons of the world, will be most speedily overthrown!"

Second Revolutionist: "This country's facing widespread change. The pendulum always swings back. Sound men once more will hold the reins. And see that screwballs get the sack."

Third Revolutionist: "The world's being revolutionized. By the growing power of the machine. Society soon will be overhauled. In ways of which we do not dream."

Fourth Revolutionist: "We're moving into a new era. The dynamo is on the wane. Man's artistry of hand and mind. Of the future world will be suzerain."

Fifth Revolutionist: "The whole drift of the coming order, is toward collectivism turned.

Man's action is the only hope. Where human betterment's concerned."

Sixth Revolutionist: "This war gives birth to a new world. In which the individual is king. His inventiveness, genius, enterprise, will be of tomorrow the life-spring."

Seventh Revolutionist: "A completely different social scene. Will follow the change in women's lives. Home will be scarcely recognized. When that expected day arrives."

Eighth Revolutionist: "The airplane sets the mold of the future. The world will be changed by transportation. The upsets caused by the gyroscope, will be beyond our expectation."

"So now we know what it's all about. And just what changes lie ahead. And how to make our long-term plans. Concerning future board and bed."

A Well-Groomed House

Good grooming is as important to houses as to people. Just as a simply dressed woman, beautifully groomed, looks better than an elegantly dressed woman who is carelessly groomed, so a plain poor little house that's kept slick and fresh looks better than a fine house that's slovenly. Gertrude Lawrence and the Duchess of Windsor, neither of them young and neither of them fancy dressers, are noted as beautiful and beautifully dressed women—and every report stresses their good grooming. We can think of a lot of houses like that—their charm isn't in their floss, but in their gloss.

Make It a Red Winter

By Ruth Gregory

Too bad we couldn't make with the paint brush here, because all the things sketched in this column are red; bright, wonderful red. It's the cheeriest, warmest color in the world. That's why we recommend it for winter.

Here's a swell robe for daughter, wife, sister, mother (providing she's a size 10 to 20). It's a medium-wale corduroy robe which comes in three beautiful red shades—festive red, a softer red, and a plum shade. (Also available in three good blue shades.)

Corduroy is a top-of-the-list favorite for robes, because it's longwearing, warm, and easily laundered. This one is nicely tailored, and for about $11, you won't go wrong.

Bright Weskit—Here's a wartime fashion revival that makes sense—the fitted vest, just like grandpa used to wear. They're available in several kinds of fabric—flannel corduroy, knitted. They make a warm addition to a suit or blouse and skirt.

This one is in red flannel, but the same store has a big selection of weskits in all different colors—even striped ones—and materials. They're all about the same price—around $8.

Sassy Aprons—If you entertain a lot, you'll appreciate a dainty hostess apron like this one sketched. It's made of rayon taffeta and decorated with a contrasting border—plaid or floral design. Here again, we tell for it in bright red, but there are a score of colors available. About $3.50.

Mexican Mittens—Here's an all-wool mitten, hand-woven from Mexico. It's really a glove because it's fitted at the wrist and sports a little cuff. No icy blasts can pierce this hand-warmer. Comes in small, medium, and large, and is around $4.

Button-Hats and All-Wool Scarves—Here's a warm and pretty headpiece for a junior. It's knit like a stocking cap and decorated with gold-colored buttons. Very saucy looking. So is its pillbox shaped sister with gilt buttons clustered together for ornament. Available in red, or several other colors. About $6.50.

The all-wool knit scarf with fringed tassels end will stand as a bulwark against the common cold and other wintry ills. Comes in several colors (red of course), and is just under $2.

Toe-Toasters—These have been around for quite a time, and they're wonderful for cold feet. Felt-soled with bright sock uppers, decorated with a sprightly border. Very comfortable and very warm. Under $2.

For further information, please call National 4200, Extension 324, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Hints for Homemakers

Shoe Cleaning

If you can't find a rubber sponge for cleaning your suede shoes, salvage an old piece of georgette for that purpose. This material will give the gentle touch which a wire brush won't.

Jumpers

How about copying your favorite summer cotton jumper in winter jersey? It'll be comfortable and convertible with several broadcloth blouses.

Mirror Scheme

Have any old mirrors? Try cutting them down and using to line the reveals of deep-set windows. The mirrored reveals will reflect the outer view, as well as any plants you may have on the window sill.

Time-Saver

News for the harried homemaker who keeps track of ration stamps: a new portable calculating machine not only divides, multiplies, adds and subtracts automatically, but also prints the results directly onto statistical forms.

Toy Elephant

It's about time to make an elephant out of remnants of your child's pinafore, now that Christmas is nearing. Draw outline and cut one piece for each side. Sew these to a 2-inch bank of material to give thickness. Then stuff. Ears are flat and tacked on, while the eyes and tail are made from yarn.

Stewed Chicken a la Mexican Put one good fat hen (not in pieces) in boiling water with 1/2 tsp. salt, one tsp. McCormick Onion Salt, 1 tsp. McCormick Chili Powder, and 1 tsp. McCormick Black Pepper. When done, make gravy and serve. Menfolk will cheer this one.

Your Baby And Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The ordinary problems of an ordinary family, which heretofore have seemed heavy enough, dwindle to nothingness in comparison to those faced by any wartime family.

Mothers must minimize their own guilty feelings because they are no longer able to get (or pay for) the type of diet they have been taught to consider adequate for growing children.

If they work outside the home, as thousands do, they must be responsible for the usual burdens for the physical and emotional welfare of their families and use their own strength, physical and nervous, to fulfill the demands of their jobs.

If this weren't enough to turn a parent's hair gray, she now must shoulder the blame for the delinquency of her adolescent children, her girls out on the loose all day, unsupervised, and her boys with their pockets bulging with the easy money from numerous often undemanding jobs.

BETTER PARENTHOOD WEEK, initiated by Parent's Magazine with the support of the U. S. Children's Bureau, is focusing this year's attention upon the following five aims, which are pertinent to every war parent everywhere.

1. To mobilize the families of America for wholehearted cooperation with all the Government appeals for civilian action in the war effort.

2. To make parents more fully aware of the importance of wholesome family relationships in keeping up morale, and to acquaint them with the many sources of help and information available to them in handling child-rearing problems.

3. To encourage the establishment of day centers for the young children of working mothers and after-school supervision of their school-age children.

4. To prevent a wartime increase in juvenile delinquency by providing recreational facilities in every community for older boys and girls.

5. To lend active support to all efforts in behalf of maternal and child health, improved nutrition, better schools and vocational training and friendlier relations between people of different origins and beliefs.

As with all laudable aims, they are meaningless until we translate them into projects. That is the job of every parent in every community everywhere.

Our leaflet, "Help to Be Had From Books," enumerates the booklets for the aid of parents' problems which may be had from both the Canadian and United States Government. It may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper.

Foreign War Relief Groups To Hold Meeting Tuesday

Leaders in the Washington committees of 12 foreign war relief organizations are to meet Tuesday afternoon, October 26, at 4 p. m. in the North Lounge of the Carlton Hotel to complete plans for the reorganization of an expanded United War Relief Center to be established in a central location in the near future.

Belgian War Relief is to be represented at the meeting by Roberts Woods Bliss and Mrs. F. Burrell Hoffman; British War Relief by Mrs. James E. Schwab; Czechoslovak Relief by Mme. Vladimir Hurban; French Relief Fund, Inc., by Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor; Greek War Relief by Achilles Catsonis; American Friends of Luxembourg by Mme. Hugues Le Gallis; Norwegian Relief by Peter O. Moe; Polish War Relief by Mme. Jan Ciechanowska and Mrs. Frank Simonds; Queen Wilhelmina Fund by Mme. A. London, Charles C. Glover Jr., Mme. Rene van Swinderen, Mme. H. Van Vredenburg and Mrs. M. W. Koning Hamilton; Russian War Relief by Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Lauchlin Currie, Mrs. Raymond Clapper and Mrs. Wayne Coy; United China Relief by Wilson Compton, Mrs. Frederick Brooke, Mrs. Paul Homan and Mrs. Mason Gulick; and United Yugoslav Relief by Mme. Constantin Fotich and Miss Alice Dodge.

Washington is probably the first city of the Nation to attempt on so broad a scale an "experiment in international friendship and cooperation" according to Dr. Paul F. Douglas, chairman of the United War Relief Center.

"Our city is unique in that we have access here to outstanding leadership from all nations," he added. "We are pioneering in setting a pattern for the development of mutual understanding and appreciation which will serve as a solid basis for the relief and rehabilitation of war zone sufferers in the countries of our allies."

Col. Julius I. Peyer is acting as advisory counsel for the reorganized center, and Achilles Catsonis is secretary. Mme. A. London and Mrs. Taylor have been elected vice chairmen.

Miss Downey Engaged to Lieut. Knowlton

Maj. Fairfax Davis Downey, U. S. Army, and Mrs. Downey, of New York, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Peggy Downey, to Lieut. William Allen Knowlton, USA, son of the late Frank Warren Knowlton, of Weston, Mass., and the late Mrs. Richard Burleson.

Miss Downey was graduated from the Brearley School, is a member of the New York Junior League and made her debut at the junior assemblies in 1942. She is the granddaughter of the late Dr. Samuel S. Adams and of Mrs. Adams, of Washington, and of the late Brig. Gen. George F. Downey and Mrs. Downey, of Washington.

Mr. and Mrs. George Creel entertained last night with a dinner at their apartment on Columbia rd.

Miss Annie Laurie Rankin, daughter of Representative and Mrs. John E. Rankin, entertained at luncheon on Saturday in honor of Miss Harriet Campbell Whitehurst, whose marriage to Dr. Arthur Lankford, Jr., will service.

Frances Coyner Becomes Bride Of Mr. Nichols

Currently on a wedding trip to New York are Mr. and Mrs. Jack O. Nichols.

The bride is the former Miss Frances Mary Coyner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Coyner and Mr. Nichols is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. Stanley Nichols, all of this city. Their marriage took place on Saturday in the Church of the Transfiguration, with the Rev. John J. Quelly officiating.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of ivory satin, a fingertip length veil and carried white roses. Mrs. B. A. P. Decher, the matron of honor, wore coral chiffon, and Miss Gene E. Nichols, the maid of honor, was costumed in blue net. Eric F. Bombard served as best man and ushering were Charles Ingalls and Edward Cockrum. A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride is a graduate of American University and is a member of Alpha Phi Sorority. Mr. Coyner, who is now with the Coast Guard, attended American University and Benjamin Franklin University.

Miss Wright Gives Tea For Palencias

The Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, the Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron were the ranking guests at a tea given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Letitia Ballard Wright and Miss Irene Wright in honor of Don Ceferino Palencia, Spanish artist, and Senora de Palencia.

Among the guests attending the 5 to 7 p. m. fete was Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, who first met the Palencias many years ago in Rome. With Mrs. Keyes, was her son, John Keyes, who has recently returned from South America.

Capt. and Mrs. Chester Wells were there and exchanged reminiscences with the honor guests who once visited them in Madrid. In Wright residence on Livingston st. hangs a photographic copy of a painting of Senora de Palencia which was done by Maurice Fromkes in Spain. Entitled "The Spanish Lady," it portrays Senora de Palencia in the prize-winning costume which she wore at the Bellas Artes Ball in Madrid during the time she was the house guest of Capt. and Mrs. Wells.

Mrs. R. R. Baker Is Hostess After Tour

Mrs. Richard Royall Baker, jr., of Alexandria entertained a few friends at buffet supper on Saturday evening following the tour of old houses sponsored that day by the auxiliary board of the Alexandria Hospital.

Her Colonial house at 115 South St. Asaph st., which contains six of the original fireplaces which are similar to those at Gadsby's Tavern, was the second home in the tour of 13 houses and the historic Stabler-Leadbeater Apothecary Shop on North Fairfax st. She was also a member of the committee for the board under the general chairman, Mrs. Irvin M. Hufford, and the hospital auxiliary president, Mrs. Charles A. Klesius.

Among her guests for supper on Saturday were her son's fiancée, Miss Barbara Martin of Alexandria, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. P. Martin. Mrs. Baker's son, Ensign Richard Royall Baker, 3d of the United States Naval Reserve, is now overseas as is his father, Captain Baker, who is in the Army Air Corps. During their absence, Mrs. Baker is at national headquarters of the American Red Cross in Washington, where she is an assistant in the division for supplies to the armed forces.

Others attending the supper were Col. Elliott Vandevanter of the Army Corps of Engineers and Mrs. Vandevanter, who have taken a house on Queen st. in Alexandria while their sons are on duty. Their eldest son is Lieut. Col. Elliott Vandevanter, Jr., who is a bomber unit commander in England. His brother, Cadet Brooks Vandevanter, is in the second class at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. William Davis of New York have sold the house they purchased last year in Georgetown and have taken an apartment at the Shoreham for the winter. Mr. Davis is chairman of the War Labor Board.

New Zealand Air Officer Here To Head Joint Staff Mission

Air Commodore James Findlay, M.C., and Mrs. Findlay Arrive From Wellington

From the New Zealand Legation comes word of the arrival yesterday in Washington of yet another distinguished man of war.

He is Air Commodore James Lloyd Findlay, M. C., of the Royal New Zealand Air Force, who is here from the South Pacific to take over his duties as newly appointed head of the New Zealand Joint Staff Mission. He will also serve as the Royal New Zealand Air Force representative to the Combined Chiefs of Staff.

Accompanying the Air Commodore to his new station here, was Mrs. Findlay. For the time being the couple are stopping at the Shoreham Hotel until such time as they can find permanent quarters.

Air Commodore Findlay fills the vacancy made last July by the transfer back to New Zealand of Brig. A. B. Williams, DSO., senior member of the Joint Staff Mission. Subsequently, Air Commodore Findlay will also relieve Group Capt. John Seabrook, DFC, as representative here of the Royal New Zealand Air Force.

Considered an Outstanding Airman

Recent developments in the Pacific war theater led the New Zealand Government to place an air officer at the head of its Joint Staff Mission in Washington. Recognized as one of that country's outstanding airmen, Air Commodore Findlay comes to Washington with high recommendations from his government.

In announcing his appointment, the Minister of Defense, Frederick Jones, said in Wellington:

"The air war in the South Pacific is assuming increasing importance and the development and equipment of New Zealand forces and bases with American aircraft and other operational

Is Native Of Wellington

A native of Wellington, Air Commodore Findlay has seen service in both World Wars. He was wounded at Loos and the Somme and was awarded the Military Cross and the Legion of Honor for gallant service.

During the early part of World War II, he served in England and Egypt. In 1941 he returned to New Zealand to serve as senior air staff officer at the Air Department and a year later was appointed Air Officer Commanding the Central Group, RNZAF. He was promoted to Air Commodore in 1942.

Mrs. George C. Marshall Is Honored At Two Afternoon Fetes in Leesburg

Leesburg, Va., Oct. 24.—Mrs. George C. Marshall, wife of General Marshall, Chief of Staff of the United States Army, has been the honor guest recently at two social functions in Leesburg. Mrs. Robert H. Fletcher, jr., entertained at tea on Wednesday afternoon at her home near Leesburg for Mrs. Marshall, Mrs. Joseph D. Patch and Miss Elsie Murphy. On Friday, Mrs. B. Powell Harrison entertained at luncheon for Mrs. Marshall and Mrs. Henry Lynn, of Washington, who is spending some time with her sisters, Mrs. E. B. White, at Selma. Mrs. Marshall is now occupying her Leesburg home.

Servicemen continue to come into Leesburg to stay during leaves and make most of the news of this section. Maj. William G. Lefferts, USA, Transportation Corps, arrived Tuesday to spend five days' leave with his parents, Elder and Mrs. H. H. Lefferts. He was accompanied by his wife and their daughter, Ellen Lefferts. Also in the Lefferts home this week was Mrs. Miles S. Lefferts, wife of Lieut. Lefferts of Fort Monmouth, N. J. Lieut. Robert Janney McCray, jr., who is stationed at Fort Fisher with the Anti-Aircraft Artillery Force, is spending a week's leave at his home, Liberty Farm, near Leesburg. Mrs. McCray visited her son in North Carolina prior to his leave and accompanied him home. Capt. and Mrs. Charles B. Buchanan, of Washington, were the weekend guests of Lieut. Col. and Mrs.

E. B. White. Maj. Robert Welland of Camp Dix, N. J., was a weekend guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Lewis. Pvt. Millard E. Rives of Ashland, Va., spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Rives. Also with the Riveses for the weekend was their daughter, Mrs. Wilbur Jefferys of Baltimore, Md.

Dr. and Mrs. John Monroe of Arlington, and their son, Lieut. Douglas E. Monroe, Marine Air Corps, who received his wings on October 12 at the Pensacola (Fla.), Marine Air Base, were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Vandeventer. Lieut. Monroe is spending a short leave with his parents before going to Cherry Point, N. C., his new base. He took his pre-flight training at Lynchburg College before going to the air base at Memphis, Tenn., and later to Pensacola. Also in the Vandeventer home on Sunday were Miss Billie Pardy of Washington, and W. M. Hickam, of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Symington entertained at a supper party on Friday evening at their home, Temple Hall, for their guest, Miss Katherine Rockhill of New York. The Rev. and Mrs. J. Armistead Welbourn entertained at tea on Friday for Mrs. A. Hutchings Frith of Warwick, Bermuda, who is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Warren Brown. Mrs. John T. Owen entertained at luncheon at the Corner Hall, in Round Hill on Tuesday, when 20 guests were present.

Birthday Celebrations Fill Official Docket

Reception at Dominican Embassy Marks Birthday of President Rafael Trujillo

By Peggy Preston

Yesterday was a day of celebrations in the Capital, a day in which official fetes held the spotlight with persistency from noon until sundown.

Along the avenues the doors of at least three embassies of the Latin-American republics were opened wide to welcome guests to luncheons and receptions that marked some special day for each country. Members of official, diplomatic, service and residential sets checked off one of the most party-crowded days of the season as they completed the day's rounds.

At the Embassy of the Dominican Republic on Sixteenth Street, the genial and popular Ambassador and Senora de Troncoso were hosts to over 150 guests at a late afternoon reception. The fete served to celebrate the birthday of the famed President of the Dominican Republic, Gen. Rafael Trujillo.

Dr. Troncoso To Depart

Earlier in the day a luncheon at the Venezuelan Embassy honored the Ambassador, Dr. Dionisio Escalante on the occasion of his birthday, and later in the afternoon the Ambassador of Chile, and Senora de Michels received guests at a reception in honor of a group of young men who have lately arrived here from Chile.

The party at the Embassy of the Dominican Republic was also in the nature of a farewell fete for the youthful envoy and his pretty blue-eyed wife. Although their departure from Washington had been rumored for some time, it was not until yesterday that the couple definitely confirmed the fact that they will return to their native country in near future.

"We are sorry to leave everyone here," Senora de Troncoso said yesterday. "But of course we will be happy to be at home once again after so long an absence." The Ambassador, upon his arrival in Santo Domingo will serve as counselor, with the rank of Ambassador in the foreign office. Succeeding him here sometime after November 1, will be Dr. Anselmo Copello.

Among those seen there during the course of afternoon were the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de Castillo Najera, the Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Conchoso, the Ambassador of El Salvador Dr. Hector David Castro, the Ambassador of Guatemala and Senora de Reinos, the Ambassador of Honduras and Senora de Caceres, the Ambassador of Costa Rica and Senora de Escalante, and the Ambassador of Panama and Senora de Jimenez.

The entire staff of the Embassy was present at the fete which in size and splendor paled beside the reports of the gala events held yesterday in the island republic for General Trujillo. The "strong man" of the republic returned to the presidency last year after four

Louise Ladd Is Bride of Navy Officer

In the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church was the scene yesterday of the marriage of Miss Louise Bendette Ladd to Lieut. (j. g.) Henry Dallas Linscott, jr., USNR.

The bride is the daughter of Col. Shaler Ladd, USMC, and Mrs. Ladd, and Lieutenant Linscott is the son of Col. Henry Dallas Linscott, USMC, and Mrs. Linscott.

Officiating at the 4 o'clock ceremony was the Rev. J. Hillman Hollister. Capt. George E. Ladd, jr., USMC, retired, gave his niece in marriage. She wore a gown of white tulle, designed with fitted bodice, full skirt and long train. Her train-length veil was held with a coronet of orange, blossoms and she carried a bouquet of white roses and orchids.

Miss Beverly Ladd, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a frock of powder blue. Her headpiece of blue net fell in a shoulder-length veil and she carried a bouquet of joanna hill roses. Bridesmaids were Miss Hope Hevener, Miss Gene Mason, Miss Jean Sexton and Miss Annette Ladd. They were attired in dusty rose and carried bouquets of roses. Col. James H. Strother served as best man and ushering were Wilton H. Wallace, Lieut. Williams J. Nichols and Elmer L. Reese.

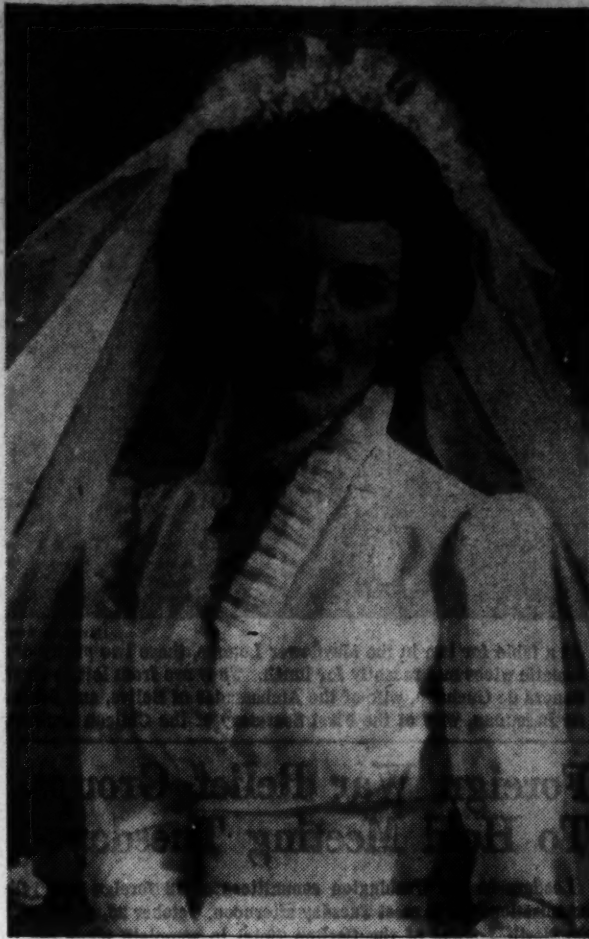

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents. After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will make their home in Boston. The bride attended the University of Maryland and Lieutenant Linscott is a graduate of the University of Missouri. He has just returned from duty in the South Pacific.

Diplomats Hold Reunion In Capital

It was "Reunion in Washington" this weekend for two members of the Cuban Diplomatic Corps.

After 20 years, these two men met once more in the Capital, where during the Harding and Coolidge administrations they served their country here in the Cuban Embassy. They are Dr. Cosme de la Torre, first Cuban Ambassador to the United States, and Dr. Cayetano de Quisada who in 1919 was Consul Atache in Washington.

Dr. Torre is in Washington now as a delegate to the conference on the International Center of Intellectual Cooperation and is stopping at the Shoreham. Dr. de Quisada, who for 14 years has been head of the Cuban Consulate in New York, is the nephew of a former Cuban minister to the United States, Gonzalo de Quisada.

MRS. HENRY D. LINSCHOTT, Jr.

Ruth Beane To Be Bride

Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Beane of Rockville, Md., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Elizabeth Beane, to Aviation Cadet George Alfred Wilson 3d, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Alfred Wilson 2nd, also of Rockville.

Col. Starling Is Honored At Reception

Members of Washington officialdom, and ranking officers of the armed forces turned out in large numbers Saturday evening for the farewell reception at the Mayflower in honor of Col. and Mrs. Edmund Starling.

Colonel Starling, who has headed the Secret Service at the White House for several administrations and Mrs. Starling have a legion of friends in the Capital. Few of these friends failed to be present at the reception which was one of the final gatherings honoring the couple before they leave for their new home in Miami Beach. Hosts at the 5 to 7:30 affair, were Mr. and Mrs. Theodore T. Hayes.

Among those in attendance were Speaker Sam Rayburn, Justice Frank Murphy, Admiral and Mrs. William H. Stanley, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Henry H. Arnold, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Irving J. Phillips, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Jay Benedict, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Clark H. Woodward, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Brent Young, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Oscar C. Badger, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ben Moreell, Brig. Gen. Leland Miller, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Albert Cox and Mrs. Dwight Eisenhower, wife of the famous general.

Diplomat to Arrive

The Peruvian Minister to the Dominican Republic, Dr. Don Eduardo Garland, with Senora de Garland and their daughter, Senorita Susie Garland, will arrive in Washington early in November to take up his duties as Minister Counselor of the Peruvian Embassy.

Purely Personal

The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun have issued invitations to a 5 to 7 o'clock reception on Friday, October 29, which will serve to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the proclamation of the Turkish Republic.

Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, has left for Buenos Aires, where she will attend the wedding of her daughter, Miss Betty van der Straten-Ponthoz to Norberto Quirno Costa, which will take place November 24.

Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, will be hostess at a luncheon on Wednesday in honor of her house guest, Mrs. Harvey O. Schmitt and Mrs. Earl Ray of Logansport, Ind.

Mme. Schayesteh, wife of the Iranian Minister, will entertain at a tea on Wednesday afternoon from 5 to 7 o'clock at the Legation of Iran.

Don Guillermo Castillo Najera, brother of the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Don Francisco Castillo Najera, left yesterday to return to his homeland after a visit at the embassy here. Senora de Castillo Najera, who also has been a guest of the Ambassador and his wife, will remain in the Capital for a few more days.

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Dierksen and Mrs. Carrere Barbour will entertain at a supper party Wednesday evening at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of Miss Eileen Farrell, who will appear earlier in the evening in the Chamber Music Guild concert at Constitution Hall.

Congressmen Plan Election Check-up Trips

House action on the fathers' draft bill, which is to be taken up tomorrow, will be followed by a lull in congressional business while many members go home for the final days of the election campaigns in their home States.

Majority Leader McCormack of Massachusetts, said yesterday that with the draft measure out of the way no important business would be acted on by the House until after the State elections on November 2.

After that time the deficiency appropriation bill, now before a subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee, will have right-of-way in the House, with the bitter fight over extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation with a Banking Committee-approved ban on subsidies being delayed until after Armistice Day.

Sees Support for Veto

The majority leader, incidentally, expressed the view that a presidential veto of a subsidy ban could be easily sustained in the House.

President Roosevelt's special message on the food situation, in which he is expected to defend and give the reasons for the Administration's 1944 food program and its insistence on using subsidies to roll back the cost of living to levels of September, 1942, may go to Congress this week.

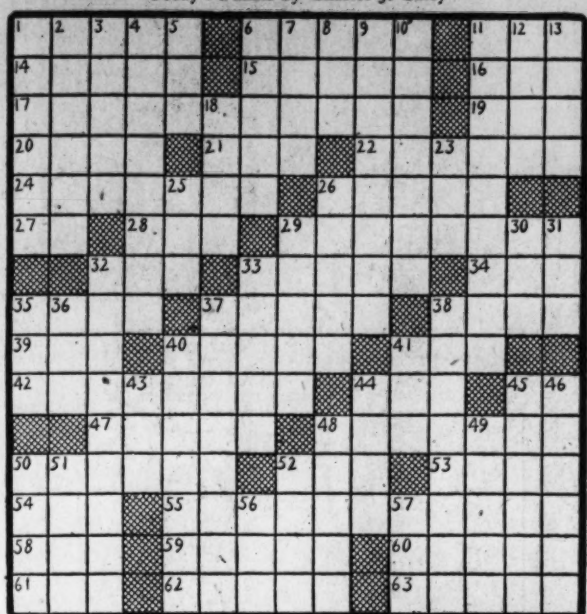

The Chief Executive told reporters at his press conference last Tuesday that the message was then on his desk, and presumably it has been referred to interested departments and agencies since that time.

While House members are taking something of a campaign recess, the Senate will be conducting its long-awaited debate over the postwar resolution reported out by the Foreign Relations Committee. Chairman Connally, of the committee, will lead off in the debate tomorrow, and is expected to be followed by Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan.

Senator Ball (Republican) of Minnesota will spearhead the attack for the nonpartisan group of Senators who are fighting for more specific language in the resolution. While Senator Connally, Texas Democrat, predicted Senate action on the resolution within a week, Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia said the matter could be disposed of in two or three days, while Senator Ball declared his side of the controversy felt entitled to at least a two-week debate.

Arthur Peter, D. C. Banker, Is Dead at 69

Arthur Peter, 69, Washington attorney and chairman of the board of directors of the Washington Loan and Trust Co., died yesterday after a brief illness at his home on Grosvenor Lane in Bethesda, Md.

Born in Rockville, Md., Mr. Peter was the son of the late George and Eliza Lavinia Peter. After his graduation from the National University Law School in 1894, he was admitted to the District bar. From 1900 to 1923, he was a professor of law at George Washington University.

His father was president of the Maryland Senate in 1888; his grandfather, Maj. George Peter, was a Representative from Maryland and his great-grandfather, Robert Peter, was the first mayor of Georgetown. Two of his brothers, Judges Edward C. Peter and Robert B. Peter, were judges of the Sixth Maryland Circuit, which includes Montgomery and Frederick Counties. A sister, Mrs. Thomas Dawson, was wife of the clerk of the circuit court in Montgomery County, whose son later was Secretary of State of Maryland. His mother, Mrs. Lavinia Gassaway, was a granddaughter of John Gassaway, an officer in the Revolution and a member of the Cincinnati.

His family has been one of outstanding lawyers. Of the seven children who reached maturity, all were lawyers and the women married to leading lawyers. He was the last of a family of nine children.

Mr. Peter was a delegate to the Democratic National Convention in 1904 and 1912 and was one of those who fought to the bitter end for the nomination of Champ Clark. This historic fight was the beginning of the split in the Democratic party in Montgomery County and of the anti-organization faction.

He attended Rittenhouse Academy in Washington and Rockville, Md., Academy.

Mr. Peter was a member of the board of trustees of George Washington University, the American Bar Association, the Maryland Bar Association, and the District Bar Association. His law office was in the Washington Loan and Trust Building.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Edith Marshall Peter, and two sons, Humphrey and Arthur Peter, jr., both of whom are in the United States Army. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the chapel at Oak Hill Cemetery, followed by burial at the cemetery.

Lieut. Bolick Pilot Killed Raiding Nazis Eulogized

Lieut. Robert H. Bolick, 22, Army Air Force pilot killed during a raid over Schweinfurt, Germany, October 14, yesterday was eulogized at memorial services in Georgetown Lutheran Church, his boyhood church.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Bolick, 4322 Fessenden st. n.w.; his widow, Mrs. Margie Bolick, and out-of-town relatives from South Carolina and Virginia attended the special service and heard the Rev. Harold E. Beatty extol the dead pilot's Christian virtues.

Pastor Beatty recalled that he had confirmed young Bolick Palm Sunday, April 14, 1935, and that he was a faithful and devoted worker in the Luther League in his boyhood and active in youth work during his high school days.

The family of Lieutenant Bolick arranged the service because of the presence in the city of so many out-of-town relatives who came to console the bereaved family. The church is at Wisconsin ave. and Volta pl. n.w.

Crew members of the Flying Fortress on which Lieutenant Bolick served stuck to their badly crippled ship and returned it safely to a field in England rather than desert their dead pilot, an Associated Press report revealed in London this week.

Postal Clerks' Meeting

Problems confronting postal employees in wartime will be discussed at a meeting of the executive board of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks which will open here today at the organization's headquarters in the Colorado Building. Representatives are expected to attend from throughout the country.

John J. Barrett, association president, announced yesterday that the disparity between wages of postal clerks and the present cost of living will be discussed in an attempt to find a solution for the problem.

States Army. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at the chapel at Oak Hill Cemetery, followed by burial at the cemetery.

Cafe Owners To Discuss Ration Plea

A campaign to obtain a 33-1/2 per cent increase in ration points for meat, fats and oils and processed foods, will be discussed at a meeting of the District Restaurant Association in the Washington Gas Light Co. auditorium tonight at 8:30. This is part of a country-wide campaign voted by the National Restaurant Association at a recent conference in Cleveland.

Basis of the present point allowance is the number of persons served in an individual restaurant during December, 1942, according to Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the association.

Smaller Places Favored

Wilson charges that this method militates against establishments serving full-course meals in favor of the sandwich shop-type place which uses much less meat, fats and oils and processed foods.

The association official pointed to recent increases in point values of such foods and declared it is becoming increasingly harder adequately to feed the rising population of warworkers. In individual cases, OPA has allowed point increases when hardship was shown.

"Increased number of points could be allowed, we believe, if a more equitable distribution setup were put into effect," Wilson said.

Just Not Enough Points

"During the summer we were able to use fresh vegetables that required no points. But with the coming of winter we must resort to the canned variety—and we are just not getting enough points," he asserted.

Additional sugar is needed also by restaurants having their own bake shops, Wilson said. He declared that industrial bakeries receive more sugar than similar establishments in restaurants.

Forty District restaurants headed by Hubert H. Keller, attended the Cleveland conference. S. Grady Putnam will preside at tonight's meeting in place of J. W. Marriott, who is out of town.

Fotitch Club's Guest

Ambassador Constantin Fotitch of Yugoslavia, will be the guest of the Collectors' Club, Branch 5, S. P. A., tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Thomson Community Center, 12th and L sts. n.w. A stamp in honor of Yugoslavia will be issued tomorrow.

19 More Witnesses Prepared To Testify Against Marigny

By the Associated Press

Nassau, Bahamas, Oct. 24.—The Crown will play its best cards this week in a supreme effort to send Alfred de Marigny to the gallows for the murder of his wealthy father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes.

Leading off with Capt. E. W. Melchen of the Miami police tomorrow, Attorney General Eric Hallinan will call the investigators who dug up the evidence against the good-looking husband of Sir Harry's daughter, Nancy.

Following them, Lady Eunice Oakes, the widow, will give an account of family friction which grew out of the twice-divorced defendant's surprise marriage to the girl 10 years his junior.

The crown still has 19 witnesses to be heard. Four of them never have given their testimony publicly. Defense witnesses will take their turns after the prosecution has rested, and it was becoming evident today that three full weeks of court sessions remain before the case will be given to the jury.

Jurors went on a beach party this afternoon, 11 of them taking a swim under the watchful eye of officers. Jerome Bethel, who has religious scruples against Sunday pleasures, took along a Bible and read while the others played.

Nancy, who has not been permitted to see her husband since the trial started, although she has worked unceasingly in his behalf, rested at home.
